Warlike Shouts.

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 24.—Tens of thousands of Russian athletes and youths of the Red army massed before Dictator Stalin in Red Square today, shouting their readiness for orders to teach Japan a "Bolshevik lesson."

The Soviet's annual physical culture parade, representing an organization of 10,000,000 young men and women, was turned into a monster demonstration in defiance of Japan, whose protests against Russia's occupation of a strategic hill on the Siberian-Manchukuoan border has precipitated a tense diplomatic situation.

Asks "Right to Fight."

Reviewing the youths from the parapet of Nicolai Lenin's tomb were Stalin, commissar of war; Klementi Voroshilov, foreign commissar; Maxim Litvinov and other Soviet leaders.

Alexander Kosarev, head of the Young Communist League, voiced the athletes' loyalty to Stalin in a speech bitterly condemning Japan. He asked Stalin "at the first sign of alarm" to grant us the right to teach the enemy a Bolshevik lesson."

Turning to the hosts of athletes, he said:

"Comrades, you have read of the recent conversation between the Japanese diplomat and Comrade Litvinov. This diplomat is imitating the frog who sought to scare the ox. He thought he could scare us by mentioning armed force.

Border Clash Reported.

"If we teach the enemy a Bolshevik lesson, we guarantee to do it in the right way and we'll teach the enemy to refer with respect and veneration to our beloved Soviet power.

"Certain representatives of foreign states have forgotten that the U. S. S. R. is not Manchukuo. One man cannot scare us as we are used to threats and we shall use force against force and our Red army guided by Comrade Voroshilov is in full fighting readiness."

The demonstration, including a parade that took three hours to pass through the square, came on the heels of reports of a battle near the village of Vidnoye between Soviet troops and Japanese-Manchukuoan patrols attempting to occupy the Soviet island of Fainaov in the Ussuri River. The incident occurred in the vicinity of Changkufeng, the disputed hill along the border.

U. S. to Enlist Civilians for Air Raid Test

North Carolina Games in October to Be 'Most Important.'

By the Associated Press.

The War Department announced yesterday it would enlist hundreds of North Carolina civilians in "the largest and most important air defense exercises yet devised by the Army."

In war games to center at Fort Bragg, N. C., October 3-17, civilians, troops, antiaircraft artillery and several score fighting planes will be utilized in testing an elaborate aircraft warning network.

From about 300 temporary stations, extending about 150 miles from the Army post to the Atlantic Coast, warnings will be sped, chiefly by telephone, of the approach of "enemy" planes.

Resembles British Plan.

Similar warning systems have been organized for the defense of London and the principal continental capitals. In this country, however, it has been tried out only to a limited degree, at Murdoc Lake, Calif., and in the Army Air Corps maneuvers in the northeast last May.

The results of the test employment of civilians, the War Department said, would be of much importance in formulating plans for the installation, in time of war, of such nets, which are an essential part of the defense of the country against enemy attacks from the air.

7 'Oslo Powers' Denounce League Punitive Sanction

Copenhagen, July 24 (AP).—Seven neutral nations today denounced the League of Nations Covenant article compelling them to join economic and financial punitive measures.

They declared their right, in effect, to decide for themselves whether to participate in the so-called sanctions.

Members of the "Oslo states," at the close of a two-day conference here, announced:

"Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Luxembourg, Norway, the Netherlands and Sweden, convinced of the necessity of participating in the League's work, declare they regard sanctions under present conditions and in accordance with practices recently followed as being nonobligatory in character—not only for a single group of states but for all League members.

Japanese Cut Through Foe At Kiukiang

Major Engagement Near Lion Hill Expected; U. S. Oil Plant Hit.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Monday), July 25.—The spearhead of Japan's Yangtze River columns smashed through the outer line of Chinese defenses east of Kiukiang today and began driving toward the heart of that city, last stronghold guarding Hankow from the east.

Chinese military sources admitted more than 1,000 Japanese had gained the west bank of Poyang Lake after a week-long battle in which the waters of the lake were reddened with blood.

Reports from both Japanese and Chinese sources indicated terrific loss on both sides. The Japanese, braving an almost solid hail of machine-gun fire, stormed the bank of the narrow neck connecting Poyang Lake and the Yangtze River and began pushing toward Lion Hill.

Chinese reinforcements were rushed to the area to help the beleaguered "God of War" Battalion, which is entrenched on the huge mound of rock which the Japanese must capture before continuing toward Hankow.

Warships in River.

The Chinese on the hill have sworn to die rather than let the Japanese pass, and for more than a week have held out against combined land, naval and aerial attacks.

Chinese reports said "scores" of Japanese warships had lined up in the Yangtze and along Poyang Narrows over a 20-mile front and were engaged in a fierce artillery duel with Chinese gun emplacements along the western bank.

The Standard Oil and Asiatic Petroleum plants at Kiukiang were hit during a Japanese bombardment, it was reported. Some Americans in the Kiukiang area had sought safety there and others boarded the U. S. gunboat Monocacy on the Yangtze.

One of the most sanguinary battles of the war was expected within the next few days on the lowlands east of Kiukiang and south of Lion Hill, where the Chinese are preparing to mass for the defense of Hankow.

Heavily Reinforced.

This area, known as the Kutang sector, has been heavily reinforced by the Chinese in the last few days. The Japanese have gained footholds in several places on the western banks of the lake, and were bringing additional troops by water.

Japanese artillery near Hukow, just east of the lake, was pouring devastating shellfire across the narrow strip of water and Japanese planes were roaring over Lion Hill and "Elder Orphan Hill,' another promontory nearby.

Agnes Smedley, American writer, arrived at Hankow yesterday and reported Japanese planes had carried on a devastating raid at Changsha, bombing the airport and parts of the city. The raiders dropped explosives within a block of the Red Cross hospital and another within 50 yards of the Ninety-fifth Base Hospital.

300 Waziris Raid Indian Town; Kill 9

Bannu, Northwestern Frontier Province, India, July 24 (AP).—Nine persons were killed, 24 wounded and shops were looted yesterday by 300 Waziri bandits.

The raiders descended from the nearby mountains bordering on Afghanistan, where uprisings have given British authorities much trouble.

Marie Placed in Royal Vault; Rumanian Thousands Mourn

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, July 24.—Rumania paid its last respects today to dowager Queen Marie, whose body was placed in the royal Rumanian tomb at Kurtea de Argesch.

Hundreds of thousands gathered about the palace in Bucharest while four Metropolitans and 50 bishops of the Rumanian Orthodox Church conducted services.

Then the populace and thousands of soldiers lined the streets as a gun carriage drawn by six black horses bore the Queen's body from the palace to the royal railroad station.

Crowds of women and 300 priests kneeled while the coffin was placed on the train and remained kneeling until it had rumbled off.

Three stops were made so peasants and villagers might pay tribute to the Queen.

Shortly after 4 p. m., Rumanian army officers, with the coffin hoisted high on their shoulders, bore the English noblewoman, who became their Queen to the royal Rumanian tomb.

All day long church bells tolled throughout the land. From almost every house fluttered purple mourning banners.

Swimmer Rescues 14 Marooned by Floods

Hero Carries Wire by Which Family in Texas Is Dragged Through Torrent; River Levels Steady as Rains Cease.

By the Associated Press.

San Saba, Tex., July 24.—Red Cross headquarters announced tonight rescue workers believed all of the 23 persons marooned by flood waters of the San Saba River were safe.

Volunteer boatmen and swimmers who bucked the swirling current to carry 20 of them to safety against dangerous odds abandoned their task when officials learned the persons previously unaccounted for were safe.

Out of the flood-harassed region came a tale of heroism, but full credit could not be given for only the hero's last name was known—and it was Jones. The lad, a son of Rancher J. D. Jones, swam 300 yards through the swift waters to a barn where 14 members of the family of Jose Jamanay were perilously marooned.

He secured a wire from the barn to the bank and the entire family, including several children, pulled themselves hand-over-hand to safety.

The crest of the flood was passing San Saba late this afternoon. The water reached 42½ feet above flood stage, short of yesterday's high of 45.

A boat, piloted by George Nalle, of Austin, and his son, George, jr., battled through tree-tops and dangerous debris to a house where Vernon Gunther, Charles Harkey, Taylor Hendricks and C. A. Harkey had been stranded and brought them also to Harkeyville.

A short time previously, a boat manned by Billie Disch, jr., and Paul Torn, of Austin, had taken two other men, whose names were not learned, from a roof, only to meet near-disaster when their boat capsized after ramming pilings of a trestle.

Disch and his companions saved themselves by clinging to the trestle and making their way to the bank. They were later picked up and returned to San Saba by Nalle, whose power boat was the only one of eight craft engaged in rescue work which had been able to make way against the current.

U. S. Bar Moves To Streamline States' Courts

Judicial Procedure Reform Mapped as Convention Opens Today.

By Geoffrey Parsons, Jr.,
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 24.—Seven reports outlining reforms in judicial procedure to "streamline" the State courts of the country provide the chief agenda for the sixty-first annual convention of the American Bar Association opening here tomorrow.

The reports, filling nearly 200 printed pages, are virtually assured of adoption by the convention, which is expected thereupon to map a campaign to get the proposed judicial reforms written into the legislation of the various States.

New rules of civil procedure for the Federal Court of the United States become effective next September 16, climaxing a successful 30-year battle by the American Bar Association and others for mod-

2 Foreign Planes Leave New York For Europe Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 24.—The British pick-a-back airplane Mercury and the German catapult plane Nordmeer, which arrived at Port Washington, Long Island, on Thursday and Friday, respectively, will leave tomorrow for Southampton, England, and the Azores.

Capt. Donald C. T. Bennett, pilot-navigator of the Mercury, which carries a crew of four, will take off from the Manhasset Bay base of the Pan American Airways at 8 a. m. for a leisurely trip to Southampton by way of Montreal, Botwood, N. F., the Azores and Lisbon.

The four-motored monoplane will take off under its own power after each stop; it will carry a greatly reduced fuel load by comparison with the 1,180 imperial gallons of gasoline with which it was launched in midair off Foynes, Ireland, from its mother ship.

The Nordmeer, with its four-man crew led by Capt. Joachim H. Blakenburg, will be launched at 7 p. m., from the catapult ship Friesenland, in Long Island Sound, for a 2,397-mile nonstop flight to the Azores.

Girl, 17, Saves Escort as Car Sinks in Creek

Betty Fealy, 17-year-old graduate of McKinley High School became a heroine early yesterday when she dragged her escort from their automobile after it plunged into 12 feet of water in a creek at Seaside Park, Chesapeake Beach, Md.

She was riding with Douglas McCotter, 21, of 2200 Monroe street northeast, in a heavy rain. The auto skidded on a narrow bridge across the creek and crashed through the railing into the creek, landing rightside up.

The car dropped beneath the surface of the water. Miss Fealy roused her partner, who was stunned, and pulled him to safety on top of the car.

The car was sinking in the soft mud of the creek bottom when they were rescued by Victor Knott, 23, employe of the park. Neither was hurt. Miss Fealy lives at 3200 Twenty-fourth street northeast.

Fair and Warmer Prediction Today Ends Rainy Week

Generally fair and warmer today was the Weather Bureau's prediction last night.

Clearing skies will bring an end to the week-long rain spell which brought 3.31 inches of precipitation since last Sunday. A deficiency of 2½ inches of rain for the month at start of the spell was changed into a slight surplus yesterday.

French-Japanese Incident Averted

Tsingtao, July 24 (U.P.).—An "international incident" was narrowly averted here Saturday night when a party of French sailors on short leave staged a war-dance around a Japanese sentry and threw plums at him, it was disclosed today.

Four Japanese marines dashed up, chasing the unarmed French sailors into a launch. The marines boarded the launch and arrested two French officers who supposedly started the fracas. The officers were hustled to headquaters where they apologized and the incident was officially settled.

U. S. Reserve Sees Trade Rise in July

WPA Has Allotted Half Its Funds in First Three Weeks.

By William V. Nessly.

Indications that "a considerable rise" would be shown in its index of industrial production for July were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board.

At the same time Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, moved to apply pressure to bring about increased bank lending to business and industry, which he had called for in a letter to bankers on July 18, but which, he reported yesterday, had not materialized in satisfactory volume.

He told RFC agency managers to get in touch with the bank of each applicant for an RFC loan "with a view to securing its participation in the loan," and said that "where the applicant's bank will not participate, RFC agents will contact other banks in the applicant's vicinity in an effort to secure co-operation in making the loan."

However, his suggestion that banks enter the field of financing installment sales was severely criticized by the National Association of Sales Finance Companies.

Freight Tonnage Up.

The recovery drive was augmented as the PWA, authorizing new construction at the rate of $5,532,510 hourly, neared the half-way mark in its new program. It has approved 3,462 projects involving total costs of $883,470,068 in the working days since the program was put under way.

As another indication that business has started upward, the American Trucking Association, Inc., reported that motor freight tonnage showed an increase of 3.6 per cent in June, over May, in the business of 110 carriers in 31 States.

The Federal Reserve Board, in a general survey of business and financial conditions, said that while industrial activity showed little change in June it increased in the first three weeks of July, despite the fact that there usually is a considerable decrease at this season.

It emphasized contra-seasonal activity at steel mills in the first three weeks of July. Likewise, it noted a substantial increase in output of crude petroleum which reflected chiefly a return to production on a 6-day week basis in Texas.

Volume of industrial production rose to 77 per cent of the 1923-25 average in June from 76 in May. In the first three months of 1938 the average was 79 and in June, 1937, 114.

Commodity Prices Up.

Activity in the textile industry expanded in June, reflecting mainly an increase at woolen mills. Output at cotton and silk mills, which normally increases at this season, changed little. Shoe production diminished after a sizable increase earlier in the year.

Consumer purchases in June were at about the May level, contrary to a usual increase at this season. In the first half of July decreases in department store sales were less than seasonal.

Prices of most commodities increased in the latter part of June and early July. Prices of stocks and "lower-grade bonds" rose substantially.

Although automobile output decreased further in June—a seasonal trend—the board found sales of new cars ran ahead of production and stocks were reduced further.

Factory employment and pay rolls decreased between mid-May

Maverick Loses In Texas Race; O'Daniel Victor

Attorney Victor Over Maverick

PAUL J. KILDAY.

Sanders and McFarlane Also Trail; Other Incumbents Safe.

'Singer' Seemingly Escapes a Run-off

(Texas Is Still Texas—An Editorial—Page 6.)

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., July 24.—The Texas electorate apparently picked an Irishman with a "hill billy" band for its next Governor, defeated Representatives Maury Maverick and Morgan Sanders and imperiled another prominent member of Congress, W. D. McFarlane, in Saturday's Democratic primary.

McFarlane was given a "pat on the back" by President Roosevelt, who called the Representative "my old friend" when the President was on his recent trip through Texas, and Maverick was a member of the Presidential train party at one stage.

Other incumbent Congressmen had safe leads. They included Hatton Sumners, foe of the President's court plan, Wright Patman, Martin Dies, Luther Johnson, Nat Patton, Fritz Lanham, Richard Kleberg and Marvin Jones.

Majority now 17,963.

W. Lee O'Daniel ran away with the Democratic nomination for Governor in the most surprising race of Texas political history. Though he had not been expected to gain a clear majority, eliminating the necessity for a run-off, he jumped into an over-all lead that stood at 17,963 when the Texas election bureau closed tonight's tabulation.

O'Daniel had gathered 403,582 votes of the total of 789,201 tabulated. Ernest O. Thompson, railroad commissioner, had 161,993, while William McCraw, attorney general, who was expected to furnish the chief opposition, was in third place with 107,309.

Tom Hunter, who never before polled less than 200,000 in a gubernatorial contest, was next with 83,393, and eight others were far in the ruck.

Maverick 589 Behind.

O'Daniel will have to run the gantlet of the general election in November, but a Republican victory in this Democratic stronghold would be a tremendous upset.

There was the possibility, of course, that Representative Maverick might ask a recount in his race, and that Sanders might pull up enough to get into a second primary.

Maverick, with all but a few votes tabulated, trailed Paul Kilday, an attorney who had the support of the city machine in San Antonio, which Maverick always had fought. Kilday had 22,851 votes, Maverick 22,262.

Kilday, making his first bid for elective office, asserted the returns reflected disapproval of what he called Maverick's "radicalism." He had accused Maverick of C. I. O. favoritism. Kilday was indorsed by the American Federation of Labor and Maverick was supported by labor's Nonpartisan League.

Georgetown Graduate.

Kilday favored amending the Wagner act to provide a "fair, impartial and judicial" labor relations board. He advocated old-age pensions and said: "I think the Government can be progressive without being radical." Kilday, 38, is a graduate of Georgetown University and a former civil service employe.

The New Deal was not an issue, although Maverick was a known Administration man and Kilday said he would favor the Administration

Clark Victory May Put Him In Line for '40

By Albert Warner.

St. Louis, July 24.—With only a week of campaigning left before the primary August 2, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, outspoken foe of the President's Supreme Court bill and a leader in the conservative-middle ground Democratic bloc in the Senate, was generally conceded today to have renomination easily in his grasp.

But what his friends in Missouri are hoping is that Clark's potential victory in the Democratic primary and then in the election may be so handsome as to give sharp impetus to a movement launching the Senator's candidacy for the Presidential nomination in 1940.

Cruiser Carrying Roosevelt's Party Crosses Equator

Aboard the U. S. S. Houston, en route to Cocos Isle, July 24 (By Navy Radio to the United Press). President Roosevelt and his party crossed the Equator today and anchored in Sullivan Bay off St. James Island in the Galapagos group, completing the longest single leg of the vacation cruise in Pacific waters.

Traditional ceremonies marking the crossing of the Equator were postponed until Monday, when the Houston will go north of the line and then recross it to get to Albermarle Island.

After an hour's service, the cruiser resumed its southward voyage, and anchored for the night 60 miles farther southwest in Sullivan Bay.

Stunting Plane Falls in Crowd, Killing 35 and Injuring 150

By the Associated Press.

Bogota, Colombia, July 24.—More than 35 persons were killed and at least 150 injured today when the pilot of a military plane engaged in acrobatic stunting, attempted to fly between the stand occupied by President Alfonso Lopez and President-elect Edward Santos and that occupied by visiting diplomats, misjudged his distance, sheered off the steps of the president's stand and crashed with exploding gasoline tanks amid the crowd of 50,000 spectators watching the opening of the Campo de Marte near here.

No harm came either to President Lopez or President-elect Santos, although the burning plane fell only a few yards from where they were standing.

The wife of the Japanese Charge d'Affaires, Julio Minoda, received slight injuries to the head when parts of the plane fell in the diplomatic stand.

Shrieks from the whole crowd almost drowned the noise of the plane ripping through the stand and of the explosion of the gasoline tanks when the ship hit the ground. The plane caught fire immediately.

Some [illegible] path of the propellors was decapitated. The body of the pilot, Lieut. Caesar Abadia, was destroyed by the flames.

By the United Press.

The American Federation of Labor charged last night in its official organ, the American Federationist, that the National Labor Relations Board is promoting the rival Committee for Industrial Organization, "which seeks to set up a dual labor movement despite all the social and economic waste which dualism involves."

It added that "progressive legislation and practical democracy depend upon a united labor movement." "Whatever groups or agencies give aid to insurgency within our movement defeat these purposes," the editorial said.

Meanwhile Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, defied the National Labor Relations Board to stop him from circulating and urging the Nation's workers to read a speech he made in the House last session charging that Communists are active in the Committee for Industrial Organization.

In an open letter to the board, Hoffman said he was acting on the basis of press dispatches which stated the board had held that circulation of the speech at the Muskin Shoe Co., Westminster, Md., on company time and company property constituted a violation of the Wagner labor act.

Won't Flout "Lawful Order."

"I am now offering, and intend to continue to offer, to furnish to any and all interested persons, including employes, employers or others, copies of this address for circulation at the actual cost of printing, and to recommend that employes might well read this address before joining the C. I. O.," Hoffman wrote.

Proclaiming his desire to avoid disobeying "any lawful order" of any court or board, Hoffman demanded that the agency advise him under what provision of law it "assumes the power to suppress this argument against Communists and communistic activities in the field of labor."

He cited the first amendment to the Constitution, which safeguards freedom of speech and the press, and asked:

"Has the board held that either the board or Congress has the right to prevent an employer presenting to his employes a statement of fact, showing that a union urging employes to join is in fact controlled by Communists or by those who are criminals or have been engaged in criminal activities?"

Under the heading "Shall Government Control Unionism?" the A. F. of L. charged that the NLRB "has given an insurgent group the rights of belligerents—a privilege accorded in international affairs only after careful deliberation and full consideration of its grave consequences."

Charges "Patronage."

"Every agency of the Government that gives status to the C. I. O. gives the same recognition," it continued. "Surely this is not freedom for workers to choose their own unions and representatives for collective bargaining, but union development under Government patronage."

The editorial conceded that "the union schism makes the work of the board much more difficult" but added that "these difficulties necessitate a judicial balance of judgment of the highest order and require that trial examiners and regional directors as well as the whole fact-finding staff and all who do work preliminary to the board's findings, shall also put aside personal desires to favor one or the other contestants in the union controversy and do work which is at least of semijudicial character."

Labor, the editorial said, wants to be free. It added that "one of the most difficult problems a democracy has to solve is that of maintaining freedom for all against the designs or good intentions of some. . . .

"In the case of the national labor relations act the purpose was only to assure workers the opportunity for freedom. There are, however, connected with the administration of the law persons who have in mind results widely different from merely assuring labor the right to membership in unions of their own choosing.

"Instead of performing their function with a nice discrimination between official duty and personal inclination, they have interpreted their duty to further a dual union organization as against the established organization in the unfortunate conflict into which we have been precipitated. . . .

"It is a commentary on the failure of the board to maintain a judicial attitude that the A. F. L.—the organization which did more than any other to further the adoption of the . . . act—should feel that the act is administered in a way to promote the committee which seeks to set up a dual labor movement despite all the social and economic waste which dualism involves.

"The result is that Government and groups outside the labor movement are attempting to determine interunion problems and destinies."

Observers said that the federation's sharp attack lent credence to reports that it will seek to block reappointment of NLRB Member Donald Wakefield Smith when his term expires August 27. Smith was appointed on recommendation of Senator Guffey, political ally of C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis. Terms of the other board members, Chairman J. Warren Madden and Edwin S. Smith, expire in 1940 and 1941, respectively.

The Labor Board announced yesterday that it had certified Federal Labor Union No. 20186, affiliated with the A. F. of L., as sole collective bargaining agency for all hourly paid workers of the Babcock & Wilcox Co., Barberton, Ohio.

The board said an examiner's report showed that of the 1,779 affected employes 1,310 had signed membership cards in the union.

Working for Washington

A. B. VAN VOORHEES.

A. B. Van Voorhees, President, Credits Dr. Custis Lee Hall With Biggest Contribution to Organization's Major Philanthropy.

By Christine Sadler

Since its organization in 1917 the Washington Kiwanis Club has taken a leading part in work among crippled children, devoting a major part of its energy and budget to that activity.

Approximately 110 children are receiving surgical, clinical and hospital treatment through the Kiwanis Club today. Soon the number will be increased, for the club's orthopedic budget is being augmented by the Anson Mills Fund, the trustees of which were so impressed by work done that they selected it as the recipient of this philanthropy.

According to A. B. Van Voorhees, president, more credit should go to Dr. Custis Lee Hall than to any other Kiwanian. From 1923 to 1937 Dr. Hall, one of the city's leading surgeons, gave 14,150 hours to crippled children selected by the club for treatment—and held 752 clinics for them.

The club fathered the idea of schools for crippled children in Washington and secured the legislation which in 1929 established the two schools now in existence.

Total amount spent by the Kiwanians in crippled children work through last December was $59,501.67. At that time the number of visits made by patinets to the clinics was 22,249. In addition, the Instructive Visiting Nurses had made 23,876 visits for the club to the homes of patients.

A native of New Jersey, Van Vorhees came to Washington in 1925 and has been a Kiwanian since 1928. He is business promotion manager for the Mayflower Hotel. The Kiwanis Club receives most of his leisure time, but he is also a member of the Washington Board of Trade and of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. McGuffey Society To Enter Politics Against New Deal

New York, July 24 (AP).—Lester D. O'Dell, president of the Federal McGuffey Society, announced today that the 75-year-old organization would break a lifelong rule and enter politics with the intention of electing anti-New Deal candidates.

The organization's sole purpose, said O'Dell in a letter to State chairmen, has been "that of upholding our American education of self-reliance." It was named for William H. McGuffey, author of the famous readers.

"Under the New Deal," O'Dell continued, "our American education of self-reliance is being relegated and replaced with a political institution of dependence, which has an enrollment of 11,000,000.

He said one of the first candidates which the organization, for which he claims 1,500,000 members, would support is Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee.

Md. Guardsmen In Regimental Day Ceremony

By Phillip J. Austensen.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 24.—Rain took a holiday and almost perfect weather was the setting for the annual veterans and regimental day of the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, which began the second week of its summer training today.

Maryland veterans of all United States wars were guests for the program which opened with church services in the morning and concluded with moving pictures in the open air at night. More than 10,000 relatives, sweethearts and friends stood on the sidelines and cheered as the First passed in review before veteran organization leaders at 5 p. m. today.

Memorials Are Read.

Traffic into and out of camp was handled by special detail of Maryland and Pennsylvania State police and a detail of National Guardsmen and flowed freely with little jamming, despite the crowd.

Chaplain Frederick C. Reynolds, of Baltimore, conducted the annual memorial service for deceased members of the regiment at the Protestant Church services in the morning. Mass was held for Catholics in the brigade building.

Memorials to Capt. Bradford Massey, medical officer of the regiment; Sergt. Irving V. Cannon, of Company A, Frederick, who had served 25 years in the Guard; Private Philip J. Moore, of Company D, Bel Air, and Private Edward G. Diven, of Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, Laurel, all of whom died since last camp, were read at the services.

Their commanding officers gave responses. They were Lieut. Col. Frank B. Hines, Capt. Guy Anders, Capt. Frederick M. Hopkins and Lieut. Thomas F. Murphy.

Band Concert Given.

Headquarters Company, Third Battalion, won the softball game played against Company D of Bel Air in a thrilling ten-inning tilt that ended with a score of 9 to 7.

A band concert by the First Infantry Band of Frederick and a demonstration of firing of the 37-Mm. gun by the Howitzer Company of Kensington occupied the afternoon.

Friends and relatives were invited to eat with the members of the command. A typical menu was that of the Service Company, of Silver Spring, planned by Mess Sergt. J. L. Jewell. It included roast beef and gravy, mashed potatoes, creamed carrots, homemade lemon pie and lemonade.

Brig. Gen. D. John Markey, assistant adjutant general of Maryland, commanding the regiment, reviewed the parade with department commanders of veterans' organizations of the State, who were his guests at a luncheon in the afternoon.

Included in the group were G. A. Leutbecker, commander of the Disabled American Veterans; S. N. Serff, southern Pennsylvania district, American Legion; J. Fred Chase, national president of the 29th Division Association; W. H. Waltimyer, United Spanish American Veterans; Bruce Bair, American Legion; Charles J. Peters, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A formal guard mounting and exhibition of machine gun firing were held in the evening followed by moving pictures.

The regiment will begin range firing today in all branches of firearms with which it is armed.

U. S. Planning To Rehabilitate Jobless Women

Composite Figure Presents Pathetic Example of Relief Clients.

By the United Press.

The Labor Department reached into the Nation's unemployment morass last night and brought out Abigail Jones—a jobless, penniless and unattached woman of 40 or thereabouts—whom it hopes to rehabilitate by placing her on a self-supporting basis.

Miss Abigail is not a real person. She is a pathetic clinical study, a composite picture of the homeless woman who rapidly is approaching middleage. She has no means of support and she is destined to experience hunger, public charity and, finally, a lovely old age.

But if the rehabilitation program recommended in a report to Secretary of Labor Perkins goes through, it is the department's belief that "hope may begin at 40" for Miss Abigail.

The report is based on a study made in the spring of 1937 by Mary Anderson of the Labor Department's Women's Bureau. It gives a cross section view of unattached or non-family women on relief in Chicago, the majority of whom are 40 years old or more.

Most Shabbily Dressed.

Such women have become, since 1929, an increasingly acute problem in every community, according to the report, and it is a problem that threatens to become permanent unless there is intelligent planning to care for them.

Most of the women studied were shabbily dressed, having practically no money to spend for clothes, and this tended to lower their morale even more, making it almost impossible for them to compete in looking for work, the report said.

More than 60 per cent had been self-supporting and financially independent for most of their working lives, but their wages were too low to enable them to save for a "rainy day."

Two-Fifths Divorced.

Only a small percentage of those studied were in good health. Almost two-fifths were separated or divorced, and just over one-fifth was single. They received an average monthly relief allotment of $22.44, of which $12.57 went for rent.

Nearly seven-eights of the women reporting had been employed for others, while one-twelfth had been in business for themselves. The majority of the first group had been engaged in domestic and personal service, chiefly in private homes.

Increased allotments for relief administration to provide a sufficiently large staff to do adequate case work for all unattached women clients.

Health Help Sought.

Increased facilities for outpatient care in city hospitals, and more attention to the physical disabilities of the women with a view toward restoring their health to permit them to work.

Improved standards for hours, wages and working conditions for women household employes.

A study of vocational opportunities in private, public and self-help co-operatives and good will industries.

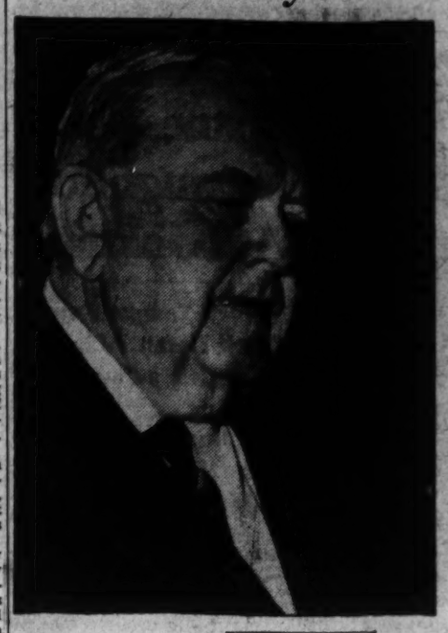
Roosevelt 'Discoverer' Says 3d Term May Be 'Necessary'



"Judge" Henry Revill, of Greenville, Ga., original Roosevelt man, said yesterday in his country weekly "it may be necessary" for Roosevelt to run again in 1940.

'If He Runs, He'll Win,' Asserts Georgia Country Editor, Who Is One of Closest Friends of the President.

Greenville, Ga., July 24 (AP).—"Judge" Henry H. Revill, the "original Roosevelt-for-President man," said today "it may be necessary" for the President to run for a third term in 1940.

"And if he runs," the bulky white-haired editor of the weekly Meriwether Vindicator asserted, "he'll be elected."

"Judge" Revill was speaking in the weather boarded little newspaper office in which he wrote the editorial proposing Franklin D. Roosevelt for the White House before most of the country thought the Democrats had a chance of ousting the Republicans from power. The "judge" would have to look up his old files to be sure of the date of that editorial now, but it was "somewhere back in the '20s."

"I'd be for him for a third term if he wanted it," the editor who once was Meriwether County judge drawled between quick puffs on a cigaret.

"Barkley Could" Carry On.

"He'll have to run again if he can't find someone else who can carry on his policies. If he didn't run and didn't find someone strong enough to carry on what he has begun we would lose everything we have gained during his Administration—and his Administration has been closer to the heart of the American people than any we ever had before."

Is there anyone else who would carry on the Roosevelt program?

"Barkley could."

He snapped the words as though he had no doubt about it. He meant United States Senator Alben S. Barkley, of Kentucky.

Is there anyone other than Barkley?

No One Else as Good.

These words came slower, more deliberate, and this country squire who "discovered" the future President at nearby Warm Springs during the early Roosevelt infantile paralysis days leaned back in his chair and looked at the keys of his typewriter.

"There are some," he repeated, "but I don't think any of them could do as good a job as President Roosevelt."

There was no hint that the "judge" had discussed any of this with the President, no sign of any awareness of the President's attitude except for the matter-of-fact statement "I know him as well as anyone in the country, I guess."

Georgia politicians, however, know that whenever the President visits Warm Springs the first person to greet him at the train is "Judge" Revill and that the "Judge" is the last person to shake the Roosevelt hand on departure.

They know that the "Judge" goes down to the Little White House to "chew the fat" when the President is there, and that some of the things the "Judge" was told in those conversations later turned out to be part of the New Deal program.

So when "Judge" Revill says "It may be necessary" for the President to run for a third term, the politicians wonder if that means President Roosevelt is thinking of running.

Judge Leser Enters Md. Senate Battle

He was the only one of three Republican senatorial candidates announcing within three days to receive the support of Republican Governor Harry W. Nice, who is seeking re-election.

U. S. Complains States Hamper Farmers' Trade

Seeks to Eliminate Laws Hindering Passage of Heavy Trucks.

The Agriculture Department disclosed yesterday that it was trying to eliminate "barriers" to commerce in farm products among the various States.

Department officials said such trade barriers existed in three types of State legislation: licensing requirements and taxes on out-of-State trucks; regulations dealing with weights, sizes and equipment of out-of-State trucks, and port of entry laws.

A study of the effect of these laws is being made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Officials said it was hoped the study would "point the way to a better program of legislation which will promote free internal trade in the interest of producers, dealers and consumers."

States which officials said had laws which tended to obstruct trade included Arizona, Kansas, Oklahoma, Wyoming, Florida, Colorado, Minnesota, Virginia, South Carolina, Maine, Kentucky, Tennessee, California, Nebraska, New Mexico, Idaho and Utah.

"State legislatures have been active," bureau officials said in a preliminary report, "in passing laws and authorizing administrative regulations dealing with the weight, size, equipment and insurance of motor vehicles. The variety and nonuniformity of these laws have constituted an appreciable hindrance to interstate commerce; moreover, the limits set may be so low as to prevent long-distance hauling."

The report cited a Kansas law as an example of the port of entry system. Under this system incoming trucks are halted at the border for inspection and collection of taxes. All trucks must obtain proper clearance before they may move on to their destinations.

The report said the Kansas system has been adopted by Oklahoma, Nebraska, Arizona, New Mexico, California, Idaho, Utah and Colorado.

European War Would Embroil U. S., Peer Says

Marquess of Lothian Links America to Fate of British Empire.

By the United Press.

London, July 24—The Marquess of Lothian, wartime adviser to David Lloyd George, said in an interview tonight the United States will be unable to keep out of any long, general war embroiling Europe's nations.

"Once war starts the range of air attacks will compel the United States in self-defense to occupy strategic points from which her own ports and cities could be attacked," Lord Lothian said.

"The British commonwealth is the United States' outer ring of security. If it disappears or is smashed by the Fascist states so that Gibraltar, the Suez, Singapore, Capetown and the Falkland Islands fall into the hands of Germany, Italy or Japan then, as the British Empire disintegrates, the military powers would crowd around the United States.

"Stupendous armaments would be imposed on United States security and her sea-borne trade endangered. The Monroe Doctrine might possibly become unworkable."

The British Empire and the United States, Lord Lothian said, can not only defend the security of democratic institutions in their own zones, but can end the risk of a world war.

"Britain's power to single-handedly hold the bulwark against a world war is gone," he said. "She is now only one of a crowd.

"But the United States with France, Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa can restore control of the seas and create a combination—economically, navally and in the air—so strong that, while there might be local wars, there would be no world war because nobody would be strong enough to risk it."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Victor Kolar conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday night in the fifth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate. Program: Overture to "Ruy Blas" (Mendelssohn), Symphony in D minor (Schumann), Prelude in C sharp minor (Rakhmaninov), "Liebestraum" No. 3 (Liszt), "Cagliostro Walzer" (Strauss), "Capriccio Italien" (Chaikovski).

Celebrating the return of fair weather, an audience of major dimensions assembled last night at the Potomac Watergate to hear the fifth summer concert of the National Symphony Orchestra and to extend a cordial welcome to Victor Kolar, conductor of the Detroit Orchestra, who appeared as the second guest director of the series. In contrast with the previous week, which had seen two postponements and one concert played through a persistent rain, the evening was balmy and favorable to the enjoyment of the listeners, who gathered by the thousands to take advantage of the opportunity.

Mr. Kolar opened his program with Mendelssohn's overture to Victor Hugo's "Ruy Blas," which may be considered as the pleasantest tribute ever paid by one poet to another whom he did not like. This composition, which will be a century old next March, was the product not so much of inspiration as of wounded vanity. Mendelssohn had been commissioned to write an overture and set one song for a performance of Hugo's play in Leipzig for the benefit of the theatrical pension fund. He disliked the subject of the drama so much that he fulfilled only the minor part of the commission. When the committee expressed regret that he had not had time to compose an overture, he was stung to the quick by the insinuation that his fancy had flagged, and completed the piece in three days.

As we view the work today, it suits its purpose as admirably as though it had been a labor of love. It strikes the right romantic note and presages the tragedy that closes the intrigues of the plot. At the same time, it gently mocks the high-flown style of Hugo with the fanfaronades of its chordal passages.

The symphony of the evening was Schumann's D minor which was published as his fourth although it actually was his second. One of his most strongly idiomatic works, it was originally titled a symphonic fantasia because of the free form and the improvisatory character of the writing. Filled with Schumann's imaginative poesy, it represents that phase of his nature which was akin to the gentle philosophy of his favorite author, Jean Paul Richter. Mr. Kolar gave it a reading appropriate to its essential qualities.

After the intermission, the orchestra played the National Anthem as a prelude to the raising of the official flag of the Sunset Symphonies, a banner designed by W. Kingsley Utteridge and won a prize of the National Symphony Association.

The second half of the program began with a transcription of Rakhmaninov's piano prelude in C sharp minor, a piece that does not stand kindly its transmogrification into orchestral size. On the other hand, the third "Liebestraum" of Liszt, which came immediately afterward, sounds better in orchestral amplification than in its familiar guise as a piano solo.

Certain waltzes of Johan Strauss the Younger have been thrust upon us so frequently that it was a pleasure to hear of the neglected sets taken from his fourth operetta, "Cagliostro Italien," but the audience was not content to disperse without additional numbers. Recalled to the platform by insistent applause, Mr. Kolar responded with two of his own compositions: the "Titan" march and "Ford's Victory March."

Nazis Expect 200,000 At Huge Sports Festival

Breslau, Germany, July 24 (AP).—Vast crowds filled this city to overflowing today for the colorful opening of Greater Germany's first "gymnastic and sports festival" in which 200,000 Germans and many from abroad are expected to participate. Ten cities near Breslau prepared to handle overflow guests.

The week-long program is regarded as exemplification of the Nazi theory that bodily exercise no longer is the individual's private concern, but one of the National Socialist state's most important educational interests.

Bogel, Once Famed Ibsen Actor, Pines at Congressional Library

By Jean Brownell.

A reference room buried deep in the Library of Congress is hardly the place you would look for a retired actor who for 20 years played with Minnie Maddern Fiske, George Arliss and others of the theater's great.

Yet there he is. His name is Claus Bogel. Surrounded by the 6,000 volumes in the room where he works, he likes to think back to the days when critics hailed his portrayals of Ibsen's characters.

He also likes to look ahead to the time when he will have earned money enough to start for Hollywood and embark on another acting career.

Bogel, a bachelor, has lived in Washington since 1918, when he left the stage to join the Army's Military Intelligence as one of the "Black Chamber" boys. "By the time the war was over, I had fallen in love with the city and decided to stay," he explained yesterday.

Bogel's career started in New Orleans, his birthplace. When he was 16 he had the distinction of making his debut with the great Edwin Booth—as a $1-a-night extra in "Julius Caesar."

A prized scrapbook contains his first pay envelope, marked $10.11." He received it in 1901, after leaving a much-hated job in a New Orleans broker's office to try his luck in New York. There he became assistant stage manager in Mrs. Fiske's company.

Appointed understudy to one of the actors in the popular "Miranda of the Balcony," he received his first speaking part through a combination of luck and acting ability.

"Mrs. Fiske called me to her office one night," he explained. "I thought, 'Well, I've done something wrong and I'm probably all through.' Instead she said, 'Mr. Bogel, you were overheard rehearsing today. You will get a part as soon as I can arrange it.'"

Soon afterward an Englishman who played an Arab's part in the piece left the company and Bogel took his part. His first line was, "Allah is my witness if I can longer endure such desolation."

He was rather disconcerted the first night when a fellow-actor lying bound in the tent where both were "prisoners," muttered to him, after his opening speech, "Good boy, Bogie, keep it up." He later learned that such informality is common among stage folk. A favorite prank, he says, is to hold wet grapes or other clammy objects in the hand when the script calls for a hearty handshake.

He had a more important role in "A Bit of Old Chelsea," although he was pretty embarrassed during one performance of the play. Mrs. Fiske, playing the part of a waif whom he befriended, had to climb into a bunk fastened to the wall of the set. One night it collapsed, depositing her on the floor.

"She was furious," Bogel recalls. "After that I had to get in the bed myself before curtain time and bounce up and down, to prove to her it was a fastened securely."

He remembers the gerat actress as the most generous person he ever played with. "She refused to take a curtain call alone and never stole a scene," he says. Although inclined to be frigid when off the stage, she felt deeply all the emotions of the parts she played.

She and Bogel once took a curtain call together after a particularly moving scene. Both were wiping their eyes. "She turned to me and said: 'Aren't we two fools?'"

After a season with Mrs. Fiske, he joined an Ibsen company. His first starring role was Oswald, in "Ghosts," a part which he played for two years and which brought high praise from newspapers of the day. Subsequenty he returned for a time to the Fisk Company, where he replaced George Arliss. Others with whom he played include Grace George, Mme. Nazimova, Mme. Simone, Cyril Maude, Mary Mannering and Mme. Kalich.

"Where I made my mistake was to return to the ranks after being a star," he says regretfully. "I began to get into a rut. It also began to annoy me when directors turned me down because I was not tall enough. Sothern wasn't tall, but he was in a position to refuse to have big women in his company."

Bogel yearns for Hollywood now. He still keeps in touch with the stage and often rues the day he left it, but he thinks the movies are the best field now.

Years ago he was hired by a New Rochelle motion picture company to play the villain of the piece. A mix-up over contracts resulted in his playing a much smaller part which required only four hours work over a period of several weeks.

"Every morning I would report to work, they'd say, 'Nothing doing,' and I'd spend the rest of the day in New York. Then at night I'd collect $15 pay for doing nothing. They really threw money away in those days."

His last stage appearance was, symbolically enough, a benefit performance of "Ghosts" in 1918. The performance proved a benefit to the producer, who cheated Bogel out of $15 pay.

N.Y. Police to Grill Burglar Suspect in 'Lipstick' Murders

New York, July 24 (AP).—Police working on the baffling "lipstick murders" of Frances Hajek and Lewis Weiss on a lonely lane in Queens last October announced tonight, after subjecting Walter H. Wiley, jr., 18, to a lie detector test, that "* * * we have decided to press the investigation." The couple were slain in Weiss' car and their foreheads circled with Miss Hajek's lipstick.

Held on burglary charges after his arrest three weeks ago in Reno, Nev., Wiley underwent the tests under direction of the Rev. Walter Summers of Fordham University.

Police Lieut. Thomas Feeney was leaving for Cincinnati tonight to question an associate of Wiley, held there on burglary charges, as to whether he had heard Wiley mention the "lipstick murders."

Jewish Youth Spits on Czech Nazi Chieftain

Rabbi's Son Is Arrested as Sudetens Push Back Group of Friends.

By the United Press.

Franzenbad, Czechoslovakia, July 24.—Sudeten Germans and Jews clashed today at this Bohemian watering resort when a young Jew spat upon Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German leader, as the "Czechoslovak Hitler" rode through the streets in an automobile.

Deputy Anton Wollner, Henlein's Bohemian leader in Parliament, jumped from the car and collared the Jewish youth, holding him until police arrived.

Henlein's orderlies pushed back a group of Jews who attempted to intervene when Czech national police arrested the youth.

The assailant later was identified as Dr. Bruno Spitzer, a member of the Red Defense League and son of a prominent rabbi.

The incident occurred as Henlein was en route to Eger, 4 miles away on the Czechoslovak-German frontier, to inaugurate the Schiller festival opening there today. In a speech later at Eger Henlein stressed the necessity of preserving "German culture" in Czechoslovakia.

By the United Press.

Prague, July 24.—Fears that Chechoslovak integrity may be sacrificed to an Anglo-German agreement spread tonight among leaders of the government's coalition parties following Britain's direct request to Premier Hodza for "greater concessions" to the Sudeten German minority.

The position of Konrad Henlein, Sudeten leader, who is demanding autonomy before any parliamentary action is taken on Hodza's proposed minority reform statute, appeared to have been considerably strengthened as result of a visit by the British Ambassador, Basil Cochrane-Newton, to the premier.

The British envoy, acting on direct instructions from London, where Prime Minister Chamberlain moved swiftly in laying the groundwork for restoration of friendship with Germany, was said to have stressed that the Prague government should maintain its discussion with the Sudeten's, even at the cost of greater concessions.

Britain's new firm stand and attitude that Czechoslovakia has not shown sufficient conciliation in dealing with Henlein served to place Hodza in a delicate position.

Struggling as few Czechoslovak premiers have been forced to struggle in the past 20 years, Hodza succeeded in squeezing a list of concessions from the ardently nationalist coalition parties supporting him in connection with minority reform.

Now, he has been told by Britain it will be necessary for him to produce even greater concessions if the work of preserving peace in Central Europe is to continue without a breakdown.

Quarters close to Hodza admitted efforts to force the Czech coalition parties to make further compromises in the interests of Henlein would only undermine his position in the government.

Some coalition party leaders believed Britain had virtually asked Hodza to make his minority statute fit the pattern of Anglo-German friendship overtures and, thereby, may have upset the central European applecart.

Paris Police Seize N. Y. Rabbi, Aide, Smash Dope Ring

Paris, July 24 (U.P.)—Police announced today one of the most ingenious narcotic smuggling rings ever to operate in France had been smashed with the arrest of Isaac Leifer, described as a grand rabbi of New York's Brooklyn borough, and a Hungarian accomplice.

Leifer, a naturalized American born in Poland in 1896, and the Hungarian, German Gottdiener, were said by the Surete Nationale to have been caught shipping heroin to New York in the bindings of Hebrew prayer books.

Investigators reported the seizure of 18 kilograms (about 40 pounds) of heroin, valued at $16,500, and said Leifer and his accomplice were known to have made recent shipments to an agent in Jerusalem.

Franco Claims Foes' Collapse In Southwest

Thousands of Loyalists Reported Trapped in Huge Gains.

Hendaye, France, On the Spanish Frontier, July 24.—Insurgent headquarters announced tonight the occupation of Don Benito, loyalist stronghold in southwestern Spain, and the collapse of the government's 3,000-square-mile Estramadura salient.

Generalissimo Franco's cavalry and squadrons of tanks swept across the Estramadura plains on a 50-mile line of operations. Blasting loyalist positions that have been a constant threat to communications between the insurgent Northern and southern armies since the outbreak of the civil war two years ago.

A Salamanca announcement said the insurgents, under personal command of Franco, had completed the capture of every village within the salient.

Loyalists Admit Rebel Gains.

The loyalist government at Barcelona officially admitted the enemy was making important Estramadura gains, occupying several towns.

The 3,000 square-mile salient whose nose was close to Franco's narrow corridor of communications between his Seville and Caceres bases was reported by insurgent communiques to have been cut off when converging insurgent columns made a liaison at Campanario, 16 miles southeast of Don Benito along the Arroyo del Motar Valley.

Thousands of loyalist militiamen were said to be trapped, and hundreds of prisoners have already been rounded up according to insurgent dispatches.

[At least four were killed and ten injured, when the insurgents shelled Madrid, the Associated Press reported. Two men were killed inside a cinema on Anton Martin square when three shells hit the theater.

[A huge fire broke out in a building in the Gran Via, where there are several theaters. As usual the Gran Via suffered most.—Editor's note.]

Ocean Park, Calif., July 24 (AP).—The First Baptist Church of Ocean Park was filled to capacity today as the Rev. S. Fraser Langford, uncle of Douglas Corrigan, preached a sermon on his flying nephew who spanned the Atlantic in an antiquated plane.

The minister also offered a prayer that Douglas, "in this hour of pressure surrounding him, now remain just as serene and confident as he was during the 28 grueling hours of his Atlantic crossing."

He said he referred to the tempting offers of money for writing, radio and screen appearances and indorsements of commercial products.

Dublin, July 24 (U.P.).—The American "wrong way" flier, Douglas G. Corrigan, called today on Mrs. Dominic More-O'Ferrall, member of the Irish racing family, who is in the Dublin Nursing Home suffering from a broken neck. Corrigan spent the afternoon packing for his trip to London tomorrow.

'Most Wounded' U. S. Soldier Dies of Heart Attack in Florida

Washingtonian Had 133 Injuries; Lung, Six Ribs Removed.

Wallace H. Smith, who went away to the wars when he was 15 years old, died in Miami, Fla., yesterday, when his car crashed into a telegraph pole after he had suffered a heart attack. Physicians said his death was due to the heart ailment.

Smith, a Washington man, was wounded 133 times during the World War. He was said to have suffered more injuries than any other member of the A. E. F.

Only 37 when he died, Smith enlisted with the District National Guard when the trouble broke out on the Mexican border in 1916. He was mustered into the regular army when the United States entered the World War.

A member of the "Fighting Ninth" Infantry regiment in the famed Second Division, Smith was in the engagements at Belleau Wood and at Chateau Thierry. In his first battle he was mowed down by machine-gun bullets. Returning to the front, he was wounded when a shrapnel shell exploded nearby.

Fought at Belleau Wood.

For 18 hours Smith lay on the battlefield, his whole body pierced by the shrapnel. He suffered his 133rd wound when a German soldier stabbed him near the heart with a bayonet. Afterward, he was taken to a German Red Cross station and, when the Americans advanced, was returned to him own lines.

Smashed by his wounds, given up for dead by his family, Smith was known to his comrades in the Second Division for his motto, "Laugh and Carry On."

He was 17 years old when he came back to the United States.

When he returned the boy whom his sisters said had gone to war for "adventure" weighed 95 pounds. When he died, after years of treatment at Government hospitals, he weighed 245 pounds. But there were still nine pieces of shrapnel in his body.

During 67 major operations that he underwent, one lung and seven of his ribs were removed.

WALLACE H. SMITH.

For the last six years he had alternated living in Washington and Miami. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elsie Smith; a son, Wallace H., jr.; and daughter, Betty Louise, and four sisters, Mrs. E. B. Conover, Mrs Ira Tucker, Betty and Louise Smith, all of Washington.

His body will be shipped here for burial in Arlington Cemetery. Funeral services will be arranged later.

Border Dispute Settled, Rumor Says in Tokyo

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Monday), July 25.—A "settlement" of the Siberia-Manchukuo border crisis, which threatened a serious rupture between Japan and Soviet Russia, has been reached, according to unofficial reports circulated here today.

The Tokyo Asahi said it "understood" a Russian radio broadcast from Moscow had declared a "virtual settlement" of the dispute over occupation of a fortified hill on the border near Changkufeng, already had been reached.

The Japanese government previously announced it would propose the establishment of an international border commission empowered to establish boundaries and settle disputes now outstanding, as well as provide machinery for settlement of future disputes.

There was no indication from the foreign office, however, that the proposal had been made, or that the Russians had accepted it. Well-informed sources said it was believed the Russians would quickly agree to the Japanese proposal, however.

The Japanese proposal was for a commission composed of representatives of Russia, Manchukuo and Japan, which would investigate all such incidents and claims as the Changkufeng affair, in which the Russians occupied and fortified a hill which the Japanese insisted was in Manchukuo territory. Japan was reported willing to adopt such a method of amicable settlement, providing the Soviet government "showed sincerity" in accepting the proposal.

Nazis Pay Tribute To Dolfuss Slayers

Klagenfurt, Germany, July 24 (AP). Rudolf Hess, Hitler's general representative, paid tribute today in a memorial ceremony to 13 Austrian Nazis "who gave their lives for a great ideal—Greater Germany."

The 13 were men who were hanged for their roles in the unsuccessful Nazi putsch of four years ago today when Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was killed.

Their families and many Nazis who took part in the uprising were in the throng as the roll call of the "13 heroes" rang out.

British, French Flags 'One' to Hore-Belisha

London's War Minister Emphasizes Unity of Two Armies.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 24.—Leslie Hore-Belisha, British war minister, said today France and Great Britain now are united under "what seems to be one general staff and one flag."

He ended a series of military and political conferences with a meeting with Premier Daladier and declared shortly before his departure for London:

"It looks as though the two general staffs are as one. The French tricolor and the British union jack seem as one flag."

Hore-Belisha declined to disclose the exact nature of the conversations he had during the week with Daladier, Minister of Justice Paul Reynolds and Maj. Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of general staff, except to say they were "general discussions with our colleagues."

Georges Bonnet, foreign minister, at a political meeting in Sarlat meanwhile emphasized close collaboration between the two democracies as essential for "maintenance of peace" and as an 'important contribution to reduce war risks throughout the world."

"Never has the Anglo-French entente been so necessary," the foreign minister told his audience. Vice Premier Camille Chautemps, who spoke before Bonnet, said the British royal visit to France must be considered "an historical event of considerable significance."

'Build or Lose U.S. Subsidies,' Ship Lines Told

Copyright, 1938 by the United Press.

The Federal Maritime Commission has put new pressure behind its projected ten-year, $1,250,000,000 program for a merchant marine second to none and has warned backward steamship lines that they must begin their construction programs on schedule or face drastic reductions in governmental subsidies, it was learned today.

Commission officials said that 12 companies which have agreed to build a total of 63 ships by 1942, have been tardy in getting their programs under way. All have contracts with the Government which pay them the differential between construction and operations costs in the United States and those in foreign countries where they are lower.

One official said that failure of the companies to live up to their agreements may mean forfeiture of the contracts, or heavy cuts in their subsidies. He added, however, that the commission is confident the lines will "come through on schedule."

In First Installment.

The agreements call for 18 ships this year. Last Friday the commission let contracts totaling $10,000,000 for four cargo vessels at the first installment and officials hope that this means "breaking of the ice."

These contracts brought total construction work to 37 ships actually underway in the first year in the long-range program calling for 50 ships annually in the next decade as the "minimum need for national defense and American commerce." The estimated cost of all 37 is $110,000,000, of which the Federal Government is paying almost $70,000,000.

Of the others, 21 cargo and passenger ships are being built by the commission itself for sale to private concerns and 12 high-speed tankers, especially equipped for national defense, are being constructed by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Yard Expansion Due.

Officials said that if the remaining 14 ships are laid down, the total of 50 per year will be over the top the first year.

The commission also is speeding plans for another phase of the program which calls for 24 ships costing between $90,000,000 and $100,000,000 for the Pacific Coast trade.

A survey by commission experts indicted that domestic shipyards, despite the multi-billion dollar Navy construction program, can handle the first stages of the merchant marine building, although some expansion may be needed later. An improved economic outlook was cited by Commission Chairman Emory S. Land as another favorable factor in getting the program into full swing.

Labor Condtions Better.

"Labor condtions are improving," he said. "A growing spirit of cooperation and understanding of mutual problems pervades the relationship between Government and the shipping industry."

While the construction program is being pushed, commission experts are preparing a report to Congress on a permanent program for training merchant marine personnel. The commission already has announced plans to establish training schools on the East, West and Gulf coasts within a few weeks for 3,000 seamen and 300 officers who are unemployed. In addition, the commission is training 400 "cadets" aboard American ships.

and mid-June. Employment in the motor, steel, machinery and clothing industries continued to decline. In most other manufacturing lines changes were negligible.

Truck Business Rising.

The American Truck Association's report said that all types of carriers showed freight increases for June over May, except automobile transporters.

Although there was a decline of 8.72 per cent in June loadings under those for June of last year, the decline was not as great as was shown in the first three months of this year, when the decrease was 18.24 per cent, 20.49 per cent and 16.89 per cent, respectively, as compared with the same months of 1937.

Haulers of petroleum products reported an increase of 8.14 per cent over May and a 3.72 per cent increase over June, 1937. Improvement in the iron and steel industry was reflected in figures of iron and steel transporters, which showed a 9.60 per cent gain in June over May, though the June total was 52.24 per cent under June of last year. Movements of tobacco and textiles were higher.

Jones Letter Scored.

Jesse Jones' appeal that banks participate in more loans to business brought a statement from the National Association of Sales Finance Companies, at Chicago, saying:

"Jesse Jones has just sent a letter to the heads of all the banks in the country telling them how to run their business, and chiding them for not doing so much business as they could. He thinks they ought to take over the business of the sales finance companies, which is primarily that of financing installment sales.

"Mr. Jones say that in 1937, 25 finance companies made net profits of 17 per cent on their invested capital and the three largest of them made 18 per cent.

Held "Misleading"

"But when Mr. Jones says that banks could render this service at much lower interest rates and at a good profit to themselves, he is misleading the banks and the public. According to his own figures the profits of the 25 finance companies amounted to only 1.5 per cent of the volume of "loans" made and for the three largest companies to only 1.3 per cent. Thus if the charges made by these finance companies had been reduced by 1.5 per cent of the volume, there would have been no net profit at all.

"The principal cost of doing a sales finance business is not the cost of money. It is "general overhead," including such items as rent, wages, stationery, postage, credit investigation and legal expense. These are many times greater, in proportion to the funds in use, than they are for a bank, because the number of accounts involved and the number of collections made are many times greater.

"It must be remembered that the banks are now loaning great sums of money to the finance companies. Mr. Jones says that the 25 companies in 1937 were borrowing nearly $1,250,000,000. If the banks took over the business of the finance companies they would no longer be making these loans and so the net increase of bank funds in use would be relatively slight. They would also be compelled to build up as effective organizations and hire as many people as the finance companies now have. They would not be able to cut rates to the public very much, if at all, and still make any profit out of the new venture.

Security Law Cited.

"Not very long ago the present Government decided that banks were doing too many kinds of business; and a law was passed to compel them to divest themselves of their business of selling securities. Now comes Jesse Jones and advises them to expand into a new business, much more alien to commercial banking than was the securities business which they were compelled to abandon."

The Labor Department's Bureau of Statistics estimated the new PWA program would make possible total contract awards of about $1,867,000,000. Its study showed that projects thus far approved should provide about 7,000,000 man-months of normal employment at prevailing wages as the result of almost one-half billion dollars' worth of building material orders to American factories, mines, mills and other industries.

"The contract awards on all projects will release an estimated $515,600,000 in wages at the sites of the projects and will create approximately 5,489,000 man-months of employment at the project site," the bureau said.

It is estimated the entire program would create orders for $281,500,000 of iron and steel products.

Clark Victory May Put Him In Line for '40

Clark

Garner and Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

As a matter of fact, Missouri hardly is aware that a Senatorial contest is on, for another battle is being waged, the fiercest in the history of a State known for bitter political feuds.

It's a battle that has national significance also, for the power of a great city political machine is at stake. The uncertain outcome may affect the political life of Democratic city "bosses" elsewhere and accordingly influence the next Democratic National Convention. Most big city "bosses" are not fundamentally New Dealers.

Often hailed as "out-Tammanying Tammany" when the New York machine was at its prime, the Pendergast family has dominated the Democratic organization in Kansas City for 50 years. The veteran Tom Pendergast, current leader, long ago extended his control from a complete clutch on Kansas City to domination of the State government.

WPA Use Protested.

Repeatedly he has ridden out reform storms and attempted investigations. Last winter a purge of the voting rolls was forced but "Boss Tom" in the city elections later scored a handy victory by 40,000 and showed himself still in the saddle if not quite so comfortable.

But today Pendergast is fighting for his political life. Raging through the State, campaigning every day against him and "bossism," is Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, a Democrat who was a colonel in the World War. A militant leader who has transferred the tactics of real war to the political field with a newly found effectiveness, amazing even to his friends, Gov. Stark launches a new frontal or wing attack every day.

Lieutenants of the Pendergast machine are out on the hustings against the Governor. He is protesting publicly to Washington against their use of WPA rolls. They claim that the Governor's side is doing the same in its own provinces. To a certain extent Stark's triumph would comfort the New Deal. A Pendergast victory would mean more trouble.

Pendergast the Issue.

The immediate material stake in all this Democratic shooting, which completely obscures the Senatorial contest, is one relatively unimportant office. The question is whether James M. Douglas, backed by Stark, or James V. Billings, backed by Pendergast, shall be elected Supreme Court Judge.

Douglas now is on the bench, appointed by Stark to fill a vacancy. Billings is a circuit judge in Southwest Missouri. But the qualifications of the two men or the office for which they are contending hardly figure in the battle.

The election simply will determine whether Pendergast still is in control of the State or not. If he is not in control Stark will continue ousting Pendergast men wherever they can be reached and will take other steps to undermine the "boss" in his own city.

Fire-Wary Chief 'Burns' Stairs as Roll Horn Blares

That fog horn which Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson had installed on the second floor of Police Headquarters last week to surmon detectives to roll call caused quite a furore yesterday.

Inspector Edward J. Kelly, just returned from his vacation and ignorant of the fog horn, was serving as acting police chief on the fifth floor of headquarters.

At roll call time, the horn was blown. Inspector Kelly charged down the five flights of stairs in his shirt sleeves.

"Where's the fire?" he asked.

He was told of the signal.

"I wasn't going to take any chances in that fire trap," Kelly explained.

U. S. Bar Convention to Seek 'Streamlining' of State Courts

Bar

ernization, unification and simplification of Federal judicial procedure.

Reforms mapped for the State courts closely parallel those already adopted for the Federal Courts. It is urged their adoption by the States would wipe out not only many present inequalities, but result in speedier, more effective, and fairer dispensation of justice.

In submitting the reports on judicial reform to the convention, Arthur T. Vanderbilt, Newark, N. J., lawyer who is president of the American Bar Association, writes that procedural reform in the regularly constituted courts will go far toward solving the rapidly expanding problem of the competition of administrative tribunals.

Vanderbilt holds the view if the courts functioned properly, much of the need for the quasi-judicial activities of a steadily increasing number of Federal commissions and agencies would disappear.

"The public ire" directed at the legal profession and the courts arises, Vanderbilt said, "primarily from delays in procedure, the technicalities of pleading, and the complexities of practice."

"The most significant development of the twentieth century," continued Vanderbilt, "has been the growth of our administrative tribunals, both State and Federal, with extremely wide powers of adjudication. As Chief Justice Hughes has aptly put it, 'a host of controversies as to private rights are no longer decided in the courts.'

"These administrative tribunals boast advantages which, it is claimed, our traditional courts lack, dispatch, economy, technical skill and capacity to promote desirable lines of social improvement."

Va. Child, 3, Dies Of Spotted Fever

Richmond, Va., July 24 (AP).—Hubert Douglas, 3-year-old New Kent County child, died tonight in a Richmond hospital of Rocky Mountain spotted fever—sixth victim of the disease in the State this summer.

His father, Harry Douglas, is in the hospital with the same disease. His condition was reported "fair" tonight.

DoddDisclaims Aid of Machine Or New Deal

Asserts That Rep. Smith Won't Carry 'a Single County.'

William E. Dodd, jr., candidate for the Democratic nomination to Congress from the Eighth Virginia District, neither is backed by a "machine" nor is counting solely on New Deal backing, he said in a statement yesterday.

At the same time, Dodd predicted his opponent, Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, would not carry "a single county" of the district's 15.

Referring to reports that he had no organization support and was counting entirely on New Deal backing, he said: "If you mean by organization, a machine that lines up the voters and gives them their orders, like Howard Smith says I'm going to take mine when I'm elected; no, I haven't got it. But if you mean by organization, a large group of prominent citizens who are giving unsparingly of their time in order to elect a real Democrat . . . I have a powerful organization."

Among those Dodd said were working in his behalf were former Commonwealth's Attorney Christopher B. Garnett, Emmett C. Davison, former mayor of Alexandria; Randolph Leigh, of Fairfax; Mrs. Richard Strong, of Warrenton, president of the Northern Virginia League of Women Democratic Voters; Mrs. St. George Tucker, of Culpeper; Katharine Jenkins, of Culpeper, secretary-treasurer of the Young Democratic Clubs of the Eighth District; E. C. Wingfield, Charlottesville attorney, and Rosser Brockman, of Orange, president of the Orange County Young Democratic Club.

The primary will be held August 2.

A GROWER SPEAKS ON TOBACCO

MR. SIDNEY J. BONE tells why Camels are different

A LOT OF FOLKS DON'T REALIZE THAT QUALITY HAS GOT TO BE GROWN INTO CIGARETTE TOBACCO. FINER QUALITY TOBACCO MAKES BETTER SMOKING. I KNOW CAMEL BUYS BETTER TOBACCO. AT SALE AFTER SALE, CAMEL BUYS THE BEST LOTS OF MY CROPS—AND THOSE OF MY FRIENDS. I SMOKE CAMELS BECAUSE I KNOW THE DIFFERENCE IN TOBACCO. THEY'RE THE FAVORITE WITH PLANTERS

CONSIDER these facts: (1) Men who grow tobacco say Camel pays more to get the choicest grades. (2) Camel is the largest-selling cigarette. Then try CAMEL'S FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS and learn why millions of smokers say: "CAMELS AGREE WITH ME!"

"WE SMOKE CAMELS BECAUSE WE KNOW TOBACCO" TOBACCO PLANTERS SAY

Merchant's Son Guarded in Sift Of Girl's Death

Autopsy Indicates Companion Was Murdered With Automobile.

By the Associated Press.

Matewan, W. Va., July 24.—Paul Chambers, 21, was under police guard in a hospital tonight while officers sought a solution of the murder of pretty, 19-year-old Emma Farley, who was found dying in a ditch near the apparently unconscious Chambers Friday night.

Prosecutor Lafe B. Chafin said that lengthy questioning of the youth by officers last night did not clear up how he came by his injuries.

Chafin said Chambers had made no statement about what happened to Miss Farley.

Tells of Assault.

Chambers told state troopers two men, whom he could not identify, struck him. Troopers said the attack apparently occurred on a gravel road leading from the Red Jacket coal mine.

The prosecutor said Chambers has been keeping company with the attractive McCarr, Ky., girl since she was first employed at the Matewan clinic several months ago and said he had learned that the couple went for an automobile ride, Friday night. They were found by Mrs. H. F. Hope and Mrs. M. G. Goodson. The girl was in a ditch in front of the car, in a dying condition, and Chambers was at the rear of the automobile.

Autopsy Is Held.

An autopsy by five physicians, disclosed that the girl suffered two skull fractures, a broken arm, broken nose, multiple bruises and lacerations. Deputy Sheriff Everett Allison said several wounds indicated she had been struck by some sharp instrument.

Dr. O. O. Hodge, of the Matewan Clinic, who said the girl had not been criminally assaulted, expressed the opinion the major injuries were inflicted by an automobile.

The youthful filling station attendant was taken to the Matewan Clinic, where Miss Farley worked, Friday night after he was found. He was questoined at intervals Saturday and last night Chafin announced he had ordered him guarded.

The prosecutor directed the removal of the youth to the county jail here today, and then had him taken to the Williamson Hospital after Dr. L. F. Boland reported Chambers had a temperature. Chafin said the young man's injuries were not serious.

The girl is a daughter of Rush Farley, of McCarr, Ky. Chambers is the son of Thurman Chambers, merchant at Matewan.

more than 100 planes of the mobile General Headquarters Air Force will engage in the war games.

For purposes of the test, it will be assumed that the Fort Bragg Reservation contains an important base airdome, defended by coordinated antiaircraft units and pursuit aviation. Portions of the General Headquarters Air Force will represent the invaders.

Brig. Gen. Fulton Q. C. Gardner, of Fort McPherson, Ga., will command the defending force, comprising Coast Artillery regiments from Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Fort Totten, N. Y.; Fort Crockett, Tex., and Fortress Monroe, Va., and planes from Langley Field, Va.; Selfridge Field, Va., and a Signal Corps Battalion from Fort Monmouth, N. J.

Brig. Gen. Arnold N. Krogstad, of the Air Corps, will command the attacking force. This force will include planes from Langley Field, Mitchel Field, N. Y.; Barkesdale Field, La., and March Field, Calif.

Alaska Air Base Hinted.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

President Roosevelt, on recommendation of high Navy officials, may ask the next Congress for an appropriation to start development of a powerful air fleet base in Alaska to complete this country's Pacific "aerial frontier," it was disclosed yesterday.

The base, long desired by the Navy, theoretically would give the United States domination of the air over a 2,000-mile stretch of water from the Aleutians to the Hawaiian Islands, and strengthen the Navy immeasurably in event of a Pacific war.

Sitka, Alaska, was officially designated an air base more than three years ago, but development has been exceedingly slow. At present it will accommodate only six or seven planes. The new base probably would be on Kodiak Island. The Navy Department is anxious to make it the equal of such powerful stations as Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and Coco Solo, Panama Canal Zone.

A board of strategy was appointed recently to study needs for more naval shore stations and it is understood the Alaskan question is being given special consideration.

Some ranking Navy officers are convinced the United States also should have a naval fueling and repair base in Alaska, and it was said that such a project may be studied in connection with the proposed air base. At the same time, the War Department is perusing tentative plans for fortification of some of the Aleutian Islands with long-range coast defense guns. Both of these projects would be costly and may not be undertaken until the fleet air base is completed, if at all.

However, the recent dispatch of 66 Navy patrol planes from San Diego for maneuvers in the Alaskan area generally is regarded here as an indication of imminent improvement of the Alaskan defense system. It was the largest number of Navy patrol planes ever sent to Alaska for maneuvers. The maneuvers are to be concluded in the first week of August.

Some naval experts do not consider Sitka ideally located for a fleet air base and are urging its abandonment, except as a possible advance or auxiliary base, in favor of the Kodiak site, which is located in a sheltered inlet, easy to defend and difficult to attack. Dutch Harbor also may be designated as an advance air base, it was said.

Part of the problem to be solved by the current maneuvers is to study the potential value of all these sites, an official said.

The strategic importance of Alaska in the national defense system is rapidly increasing, officials point out, due mainly to the growing range of airplanes. Military experts say that the entire Northwest and Pacific Coast industrial sections, could be wiped out by enemy planes operating from Alaska.

They also contend the necessity for large numbers of land-based airplanes in Alaska is urgent to prevent possible enemy aircraft carriers from anchoring in Northern waters had no reports of additional drownings.

The water continued to rise slowly early this afternoon, and had reached a stage of 42½ feet, still short of yesterday's top of 45 feet. The river had receded to 39 feet during the night, but began a slow rise again.

Approximately one-third of San Saba was still under water. Local citizens and the Red Cross cared for the 300 homeless. Thirty houses were washed away, and others appeared to be in danger of moving off the foundations downstream.

Rain fell here during the nigh, but the sky cleared at noon. Upstream on the San Saba, at Menard, approximately 80 miles distant, the stream was still at flood stage. The rain had stopped.

Worst Believed Over.

More rivers went out of their banks yesterday and four additional deaths were recorded as many sections of the Nation experienced what was believed the climax of the season's longest and most severe rainy spell.

Residents of more than a dozen States counted property loses in the millions and deaths at 12. Word came generally from weather forecasters that the worst had passed.

New England suffered damages estimated at $3,000,000. New Jersey added another half million dollars to the toll in crop losses. Pennsylvania authorities predicted farmers in the State's eastern section would suffer $1,000,000 loss. West Virginia reckoned its crop and property damage at $200,000. Other States reported lesser amounts.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Far-reaching change in the Government's fiscal policies under which taxes would increase automatically during prosperous times and drop during depression periods, is being studied by Treasury experts as part of the proposed revision of the Federal revenue structure, it was learned last night.

Heart of the plan is an agreement on the normal national income; on how much of it the Government should take in taxes, and on the normal Federal expenditures during a normal year. No conclusion has been reached yet on either of these controversial issues, it was said, and none is expected immediately.

The innovation would call for a schedule of flexible rates. As the national income rises, the higher taxes would apply. This revenue, in excess of operating expenses, would be applied against the public debt and to liquidate any deficits that may have stemmed in a previous year from lower levies. The reduced rates would be invoked automatically, according to the plan, and while it is desirable that they may be sufficiently low to alleviate hardships during a business slump, experts said it is recommended that they be high enough to raise total revenues which would approximate expenditures.

In years when there is neither prosperity nor depression, according to the theory, the in-between rates would co-operate in maintaining a condition of normalcy.

The plan has not advanced beyond the study stage and experts emphasized that it is but one of many proposals now under consideration and which will be submitted to President Roosevelt when he returns to the Capital from his vacation. They will be examined first by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who is in Europe, and by Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell. Later the trio will confer on the tax revision program which is expected to be sent to Congress soon after it reconvenes in January.

Citizens' Group Protests Tavern In Arlington

Woodlawn Village Association Cites Possible Traffic Hazard.

Voicing strong opposition to the application of Virgie R. Parker for a license for "on and off" sale beer at 4700 North Washington boulevard to be known as "Virgie's Tavern," J. George Molineux, president of the Woodlawn Village Citizens Association, yesterday declared petitions of protest will be filed with the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Molineux pointed out that North Washington boulevard with a bus stop directly in front of the proposed tavern, is a narrow highway and heavy parking of automobiles would create a traffic hazard.

Molineux said the section is a high class residential area and a store immediately adjoining the property in question has an "off sale" beer license, making another license unnecessary.

Molineux said copies of the petition also will be sent to Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, Sheriff Howard B. Fields, County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan and Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, chairman of the county board.

Election of officers will feature meeting of the Arlington County Safety Council Wednesday night. Meeting will be held in Cherrydale Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

Petitions signed by more than 300 voters of Arlington County seeking a referendum on question of staggered terms of office for county board members will be presented to Judge Walter T. McCarthy Wedensday or Thursday of this week by J. B. Lowell, chairman of a special committee from Arlington County Civic Federation.

Mrs. Florence E. Cannon, chairman of a committee of Organized Women Voters, who has circulated petitions assisted by J. B. Lowell, said yesterday all petitions have been carefully checked and signers are found to be qualified voters in the county.

In accordance with an act of the General Assembly, the petition must be presented not later than August 1 to Judge McCarthy if a referendum is to be held at the general election in November.

Forest Fire Peril Lessens in West As Winds Die Out

Seattle, July 24 (AP).—The forest fire situation in western Washington improved as winds died down and cleared fire lines kept the numerous blazes in bounds.

The 100,000-acre fire on Vancouver Isand, 100 miles north of Victoria, British Coumbia, was still out of control, but provincial forest branch officials said it was quiescent. The conflagration, largest in British Columbia history, was burning steadiy in merchantable timber, but was not "crowning" or spreading. No settlements were in danger.

Forest service officials said the situation would remain critical until drenching rains soaked the tinder-dry forests.

Early Ziegfeld Partner Is Found Shot to Death

St. Louis, July 24 (AP).—John C. Meyers, 81, partner of the late Florenz Ziegfeld in bringing Eugene Sandow, the European strong man, to the United States in 1890, was found shot to death in his home today.

Texas Is Still Texas.

Texas, it appears, has once more turned wild and woolly. Latest reports from the Lone Star State indicate that it has chosen a radio crooning flour broker, until recently quite unknown to the public, to be its next Governor. And two of the Texas Congressmen recently hailed as friends of the President appear to have been left behind in close contests.

Of course, Saturday's balloting was only the primary election of party nominees. But in Texas, as in most other Southern States, nomination by the Democratic Party is equivalent to election. So Texans are already sizing up W. Lee O'Daniel as their next chief executive. No one seems to have the slightest idea of what that may mean to the State. For the present it appears merely that Texas went out for a lark and found one.

Political pundits are doubtless shaking their heads, but the avalanche of votes for the happy-go-lucky O'Daniel merely proves that Texas is still Texas. Apparently that empire of the South has not been thoroughly happy since the Fergusons departed from the political scene. At any rate, it has once more demonstrated its love for the candidate who emerges from nowhere and springs to prominence with sentimental chatter, a little music, a distrust for professional politicians and a flair for self-advertising.

O'Daniel is said to have decided to run for Governor because it looked as if most every other man in Texas was doing it. There were at least 14 candidates. In these circumstances it is easier to understand the Lone Star Staters' revolt against the jangle of political claims and their acceptance on faith of the candidate who rested his case on the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments, hill-billy music, pension promises and silence as to his record or capacity for the job.

The apparent defeat of Representatives Maury Maverick and W. D. McFarlane, friends of the President, may involve weightier matters. But at least it suggests that Texans were not swept off their feet by a certain other golden radio voice which recently commended Mr. Maverick and Mr. McFarlane to their constituents. Representative Sumners who was slighted by the President, apparently for his stand against the Supreme Court bill, appears to have won with no difficulty.

Transatlantic Air Race.

Hughes, Corrigan, two Britishers and now some Germans—four transatlantic flights within two weeks! But it's only the beginning. During the next few months approximately 50 more are scheduled. And this does not consider private jaunts by such fliers as Hughes and Corrigan. The figure represents only the flights planned by British, French and German aviation interests straining to keep pace with the Americans, who expect to open a regular transatlantic air service in the fall.

One of the six "clippers" Pan American Airways will operate on this service has been built and is now undergoing tests. It is a huge 18-room Boeing, so large it needs its own telephone system. When finally licensed, this plane and its sister ships will fly according to plans first outlined by Charles Lindbergh following surveys of both North and South Atlantic in 1931. Since then the route has been checked by five meteorological expeditions and rechecked by six transoceanic flights last summer. Regular flights will be undertaken by men with 60,000,000 miles of overseas operating experience, 3,000,000 of which have been on the difficult China run.

Europe, however, is not discouraged by this activity. The British are already in the race with their "piggy-back" plane, which is scheduled to repeat the Foynes-Montreal-New York trip next month. In addition, three other Imperial Airways planes of varying types are being groomed for similar flights in September and October. The German Lufthansa fliers, with a catapult ship now anchored in Long Island Sound, have begun the first of 28 flights between Berlin and New York. And next month the huge 40-ton flying boat of Air France, seen in this country once before, will begin a series of six surveys of the mid-Atlantic route.

All three of the foreign groups will depend on Pan American's radio and weather services during their test flights. Likewise, all will use the Port Washington landing facilities for their New World terminal. Beyond this, each is a serious rival of the others. However, as they jockey for position in the race for transatlantic air leadership, the star-spangled red-white-and-blue colors seem to have a comfortable lead.

Tax Immunity And The Court.

The Department of Justice has completed a study undertaking to justify President Roosevelt's assumption that a constitutional amendment is not needed to enable the Federal Government to tax interest on State and municipal bonds and incomes of State officers and employes. The President has also recommended that the States be permitted to tax income from Federal securities and salaries. Since Congress undoubtedly has the right to authorize such levies by the States, however, constitutional questions arise only in connection with the extension of Federal taxation.

The Department of Justice experts have analyzed in great detail the decisions of the Supreme Court with a view to determining the trend of judicial rules as to tax immunity irrespective of the Sixteenth Amendment. They have also made exhaustive studies of the nature, history and scope of that amendment for the purpose of determining whether it was meant to confer upon Congress powers of taxation denied it under court decisions. In many respects the report is an admirable and valuable document. Its chief defect lies in the fact that it is not, and does not pretend to be, an objective survey. The aim is to find support for the legislative program recommended last April by the President.

The result is a too facile belief in the willingness of the Supreme Court to overthrow all precedents that stand in the way of abolition of tax immunities. A wealth of evidence is adduced to show that the court has swept away many of the immunities enjoyed under the protection of sweeping decisions of former years and that it has often been illogical and inconsistent in its rulings. A conspicuous recent instance of the court's shift of viewpoint is afforded by the decision holding that employes of the New York Port Authority are subject to Federal income taxation. To a dissenting minority and to many other people that decision appears to conflict with a verdict of the previous year holding that an employe of a municipally-owned water system was not subject to Federal income taxation.

The Department of Justice attaches great importance to the fact that in the New York Port Authority case the court made a distinction between an officer and an employe of a State. Every reason advanced for taxing State employes, it says, seems equally applicable to State officers. Hence we are told that "it seems more probable than not that the Federal income tax may be applied to the salary received from a State or municipal government, whether the taxpayer serve as an employe or as an officer."

The language of the decision in the Port Authority case does not, however, warrant any such assertion, qualified though it is. On the contrary, significant emphasis is placed upon the fact that the employes concerned were not engaged in activities essential to the functioning of the State government. The clear inference is that the court would place in a different category legislation making the income of "essential" State officials taxable by the Federal Government.

The court has also greatly modified its position in respect to tax exemption of interest from State and Federal bonds. But the fact remains that the decision upholding such immunity has not been overruled. Hence the Department of Justice in urging Congress to abolish this kind of tax immunity by legislative enactment is simply relying on the "possibility that a Federal tax on State and municipal bondholders would be held constitutional."

The Administration has already met with reverses by assuming that the court would validate legislation of doubtful constitutionality. It may well be "riding for another fall" in optimistically assuming that the President's plan to abolish tax immunities by law is feasible.

However, if the Department of Justice can draft a statute that would abolish these tax immunities and at the same time protect State governments from any actual encroachment upon their powers, it will tend to place the issue in a new light. The court might be influenced in its opinion by safeguards of that sort, since tax immunity has been sustained in the past only as a means of preserving the dual system of government set up by the Constitution. If the same objective can be attained to the satisfaction of the Supreme Court, without these tax immunities, it would have the advantage of hastening abolition of a wholly undesirable system.

The Bail Bond Investigation.

Washington has an unusually large transient population; moreover, a high proportion of Government employes living here do not own property. As a result, when persons in either category run afoul of the law, they frequently find it necessary to turn to professional bondsmen to win their release pending trial. Thus the bail bond business in the Capital has come to play a considerable part in the local administration of justice. Bonds to the amount of $1,600,000 were written in the Police Court alone during the fiscal year of 1937.

Investigations by the Washington Criminal Justice Association indicate that in the main the collateral posted by bondsmen is genuine. The practice of pledging encumbered or unowned property, common in some cities, is not found here. However, it is clear that the bondsmen have an easy job. Bonding regulations are extremely vague; except in the Police Court, there is no limit on the amount of surety that any bondsman may write; little effort is made to inquire into a prisoner's previous record; delays and continuances can be won without so much as producing a defendant. Finally, forfeitures are seldom ordered even in cases in which the bailee has been declared a fugitive.

Acting on these findings, Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of the Federal District Court, has named three court clerks and an assistant United States attorney to review the bail bond situation in Washington. Presumably they will check the association's findings that there is inadequate regulation and a lack of co-operation. Assuming that they will devise a reorganization plan, however, the hardest task will be to overcome public apathy sufficient to secure its adoption. In that connection the Criminal Justice Association may again demonstrate its usefulness, as it did in initiating the survey.

Prevailing Wage Rates.

Since the Government tries to protect itself against overcharges by dealing with the lowest bidder, there is always a danger that the award of contracts will go to firms able to cut their costs at the expense of labor. Hence the basic purpose of the Walsh-Healey act, setting wages and hours standards for employers in the performance of Government contracts, is to prevent wage cutting by firms making bids.

It begins to look, however, as though the law might be invoked to give the Federal Government a much greater control over the wage policies of private industry than was originally contemplated. Certainly in undertaking to determine what constitutes "prevailing wages" in the steel industry, preliminary to awarding contracts, the officials administering the Walsh-Healey act will have some important decisions to make.

Last year, when the steel industry was working close to capacity, and Government orders were of minor interest, steel executives were in a position to ignore the restrictive provisions of the law. Indeed, the naval building program was held up because the companies were unwilling to conform to the 40-hour proviso and hence could not bid on Government contracts.

Today, as hearings to determine minimum wages in the steel industry begin, the situation is very different. The industry is operating at a low rate, and is greatly in need of orders. Meantime the 40-hour week has been put into effect, while the new spending program is capable of providing considerable stimulus to production. As a result the Government is in a strategic position in setting the conditions with which steel companies must comply in order to qualify for contracts.

Since the "prevailing" wage rates of the localities have to be paid by employers engaged on Government contracts, the first question for administrative determination is to decide what those rates are. In the case of steel, that will be comparatively easy. However, a complication arises from the fact that many Government contracts require considerable time for completion and there is a possibility that wage cuts might become necessary following the recent reductions in steel prices. Should award of contracts be made contingent, therefore, upon a promise not to cut prevailing wages until the contract work is completed? If so, the practical effect would be to establish a wage scale for the industry by administrative ruling for an indefinite period.

Thus it appears that, under certain conditions, the Walsh-Healey act may become a means of "freezing" wage rates at levels far above the minima called for by the new wage-hour legislation. A year ago, moreover, Secretary Perkins announced that the first industries studied with a view to fixing the minimum wage would be "those in which the minimum wages are known by practical experience to be below a decent standard of living." Clearly the steel industry does not belong in this category. There is all the more reason, therefore, for proceeding with care in the determination of prevailing wage rates here.

It is encouraging that the administrative machinery set up by the Department of Labor for enforcement of the Walsh-Healey act not only assures a hearing to representatives of industry, as well as those of labor, but also invites their participation in the discussion of the issues raised by the law. Furthermore, Secretary Perkins has promised that the act "will be administered with scrupulous attention to the necessity of open records of action, public hearings and recorded analysis of the reasons and limitations of each discretionary action."

Change In Dublin.

As litmus dipped in acid turns red, so Ireland splashing about in its new-found autonomy is putting forth new colors. Instead of Greens fighting Oranges, it appears now to be Reds against Blacks. A few days ago a platoon of Italian naval cadets visiting Dublin was set upon by a crew of young Communist sympathizers. Reversing the Guadalajara picture, however, the Blackshirts formed a flying wedge and successfully broke through their assailants to return to their ship without serious injuries.

What is genuinely surprising is the reaction to the incident in Dublin. The press loudly decried the incident as a "shame" and elaborate apologies were quickly addressed to the visitors by high officials. Significant changes have indeed come over Ireland. Time was, at least if the old tales spoke true, when Dublin would count the day lost if at least a dozen pates had not been cracked by shillelaghs. And no apologies either, bedad!

Remember the good old days—when all a government did was govern?

Monkey Import Protests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I would like to know if The Post has any knowledge of who is behind the obviously inspired series of letters appearing in your letter columns and purporting to indicate great public indignation over the importation of monkeys into the United States.

I feel that the loud noise over nothing is a trifle ridiculous, but it may give some people the wrong idea. In fact, it appears that the "inspirers" of the series have that in mind. The following phrase I have noticed many times: "for experimental and vivisectional purposes in connection with the President's campaign against poliomyelitis."

If there is such a campaign, perhaps Post readers would like to know more about it. And the President's "interest" in the "campaign" would be better if revealed openly and not through the insinuations of readers.

INQUIRER.

There is little doubt that the recent world-wide protest against the importation of monkeys for laboratory purposes has been actively promoted by persons and associations opposed to vivisection.

The Post has printed a fair sample of letters received on this subject. But communications devoted to the theme have been more actively discouraged of late in fairness to those interested in other topics.—Editor.

Negro Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A campaign has been launched by the New Negro Alliance of this city to secure placement of Negro clerks in two drug stores located in typical colored communities, whose patronage is almost entirely from this group. This is but a small beginning in what should result in a concerted and intensive battle to remedy a number of the ills that have been inflicted upon the Negro consumer in the Nation's Capital for a long time.

The pickets who have been bearing the "Don't Buy Where You Can't Clerk" signs, state that the volume of business being done by these two branches, since the institution of the picketing, has occasioned a considerable decrease in each store's volume of business.

Acknowledging the fact that the drug chain in question is not the only culprit in this discriminatory and prejudiced offense against their colored clientele, nevertheless it was high time that someone should have been selected as an object lesson. This writer sincerely believes that all fair-minded white people will agree and support this campaign. The logic of the issues being fought for should appeal to the fighting instincts of every red-blooded American—regardless of race, creed or color.

Corrigan's Flight.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

According to the newspaper accounts Douglas Corrigan is to have his license revoked for his "accidental" flight to Ireland.

Of course he broke the rules, and those rules were made to keep young men with more courage than money or judgment from risking their own and other people's lives and property. But in view of the fact that there was no advance notices to cause worry to his family, the officials or the public; that by his own admission he had no intention of flying the Atlantic; that his living depends upon his ability to fly and service airplanes, and that on this flight he risked nothing that did not belong to himself, it seems the penalty is a bit excessive.

I venture to say the American people will forgive the Commerce Department if in this case "justice is tempered with mercy" and his license to fly is restored to him if for no other reason than that he has given a war-weary world something to talk and smile about that has nothing to do with either war or politics.

We need more young men like Douglas Corrigan.

Secretary Hull's Note To Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The sharply worded note of July 21 handed by Mr. Hull to the Mexican Ambassador demanding compensation for the "moderate-sized properties of American citizens," the expropriation of which is called confiscation, cause not a bit of surprise to anyone familiar with Mexico's policies. They strike at the root of property rights under both the Roman and common law, and as a result her international agreements are almost worthless. Internal economy is shattered, while politically it appears that reactionism waits for the breach to widen in order to seize power.

When Calles was President Mexico had reached a degree of stability that bade fair to attain the level of the Diaz era, but Cardenas' personal ambition made him break with his mentor. Adhering strictly to the economic ideology of the revolution, Mexico today is a bankrupt country.

During our hundred years of diplomatic intercourse with Mexico, as noted in Frederick S. Dunn's survey, United States citizens have secured redress only after we have prodded Mexico into acknowledging their claims. Apparently, Mr. Hull deems it is now time for another of these periodic showdowns, and he takes the occasion to lecture the Mexican government on what we are doing to improve the economic well-being of the masses. But conditions below the Rio Grande are utterly different from our own, so that it is feared his yardstick can have no measuring value insofar as Mexico is concerned.

FIDES.
Washington, July 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Secretary Hull wrote a sharp dunning letter to Mexico complaining of that government's failure to pay American citizens for their property seized by the Mexican state in its admitted right as a sovereign power to "expropriate private property within its borders in furtherance of public purposes."

Secretary Hull is to be commended for pressing his demands on the indifferent debtor. But thousands of American citizens are marveling at the persistency with which the Secretary has pursued our neighbors to the south of us while he is languid in his treatment of the Soviets who owe much more to American citizens for private property confiscated upward of 20 years ago. Five hundred million dollars would be a low estimate of the American property now in Soviet hands. Certainly the Secretary has never reminded the Soviets that promptness was a necessary element in the settlement of these debts.

A word of sympathy may be said for the Mexicans. It is an impoverished state, with disrupted finances. This is not offered as a defense, but simply as an excuse for the moment. With the Soviets the opposite is true. Only a day or two ago the boast was made to the world that the Soviets were going to build a navy equal to that of Great Britain. Americans know what a great navy costs.

The suggestion is made that Secretary Hull disclose the most recent demands on the Soviet to settle the claims of American citizens whose property was confiscated and is now in the hands of the Soviet state.

The District WPA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It's high time that President Roosevelt, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and citizens of the District of Columbia do something to bring about immediate reforms in the D. C. Works Progress Administration.

1. The local WPA is in wage scale region No. 2, where the highest pay for unskilled workers ($49.50 a month) is $5.50 less per month than the lowest pay for this class of WPA labor in wage scale region No. 1.

2. Unskilled workers' cost of living has been found to be higher in wage scale region No. 2 (including the District of Columbia) than in region No. 1 (embracing New York, Illinois, Ohio).

3. Commissioner George E. Allen should either commiss or play and not also hold the District WPA administratorship in violation of a dual job-holding rule laid down recently by Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. In short, the office of the local WPA administrator should be entirely divorced from the political office of the District Commissioner.

4. Right now there is no real WPA administrator here. In view of this emergency, Mr. Hopkins and President Roosevelt should name the District WPA administrator at once.

As close as the local WPA is to the Federal headquarters, it should be a model for all of the States of the Nation. Right now it is in a state of emergency. Action from President Roosevelt, Administrator Hopkins and on down to the humblest citizen is needed at once if the future course of work relief affairs is to be sustained in the District. We had better do something or else. . . .

"Roosevelt Rodomontade."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Is there nothing that can be done to make newscasters pipe down a little on Roosevelt ballyhoo? They are nearly all ardent Roosevelt barkers. It is rare one gets the news flashes without having to listen to a long rigamarole of Roosevelt rodomontade; some of this is necessary and proper, but why go into details and take up about one-half of the newscast with Roosevelt minutia?

Newspapers, too—even those accused of being anti-Administration—are guilty of this toadying. The President and his family are continually in the front page headlines and Roosevelt pictures stare from nearly every page. That is monotony with a vengeance; certainly enduring the New Deal ordeal should be enough without that Public School System.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Constitution of the United States prohibits the use of public funds for sectarian purposes, and this means, among other things, all church schools. Those who would disregard this provision of the Constitution should learn the true meaning of separation of church and State as applied to our free institutions.

The free, nonsectarian public school system adequately provides for the education of the children of the Nation. A better system of free education was never devised. It has made our country great through producing intelligent citizens.

Private schools, of the sectarian sort, are established for a purpose, chiefly to inculcate in the minds of the children certain ideas regarding religion, which may be true or false. If the leaders of any sect wish to establish such schools, they and they alone, should be responsible for their support. Our forefathers were wise in their day and generation in establishing a system of free public schools. Let us emulate their example and resist any attempt to disrupt that system or misuse public funds in aiding rival systems.

The Post Impressionist

Music As Catalyzer.

SOMETIMES I think that the crowning achievement of the American people has been their survival of summer for three centuries. "Sometimes" is a euphemism for a July day in Washington indescribable by the unprofane, since a thought like that would occur only to a mind oppressed by estival languor. When energy is down to its last erg one cannot but marvel at the resilient stamina which has enabled us to endure torrid tormenis and come back for more. It was in such a sultry hour of inertia that I was still further depressed by reading in George Gray's "Advancing Front of Science" that man is a colloidal oxynitrocarbide of hydrogen worth about 98 cents. The valuation seemed to me a little high.

For this pessimistic mood I knew that there was an available remedy if I could live long enough to get to the Potomac Water Gate by 8 o'clock that evening. So I stuck out the afternoon at my desk, went home to make a listless attempt to eat a cold supper, and eventually managed to merge myself in the throng waiting for the open-air concert of the National Symphony Orchestra. Whether through instinct or through knowledge, 12,000 persons were there for the same purpose that I was—the recharging of our spiritual vitality.

As though the precise need of the auditors had been anticipated, the program was packed with vitamins. Frescobaldi's sturdy toccata strode along with invigorating confidence; youthful Mozart told us in his A major symphony that the world is the dwelling-place of grace and beauty; Richard Strauss, as he was at 21, released a prankish joy and romantic ebullience in his "Burleske" for piano and orchestra; Ostorino Respighi painted his tonal picture of "The Pines of Rome"—children at play in the gardens of the Villa Borghese, the magical song of a nightingale on the moonlight Janiculum, and the triumphant march of Caesar's legions on the Appian Way.

Under the stimulus of this music the weariness of the day vanished and was replaced by a calm contentment; forgotten were the discomforts of heat and humidity in the refreshment of a cooling breeze, and the weight of discouragement was lifted by the power of harmoniously ordered sounds. Once more music had proved its potency as a reviver of flagging energies and the restorer of hope in human perfectibility.

It is the realization of this truth that lies behind the rapid increase in recent years of the number of open-air concerts and operatic performances in the United States. The illogical practice of confining music within walls and setting apart certain months of the year as a "season" comparable to the legal period for hunting wild game has broken down before the national need for recreation. Music is not a seasonal, but a perennial necessity for the maintenance of morale. For we receive from music a spiritual restoration that counteracts the depressive effect of material preoccupations.

Not for a moment do I delude myself into believing that the average auditor is aware of what is going on subconsciously while he is listening to music. His intuitive responses seldom rise to the level of conscious recognition. We have only begun to study the psychology of music, and the results of questionnaires and laboratory experiments have thus far been more confusing than enlightening. We are dealing not with measurable quantities, but with intangible qualities. Yet one of the physical sciences provides an analogy that is applicable to the effect of music upon the emotional and mental fields.

Chemists have made us familiar with the role played by the catalyzer, a substance whose presence in a mixture accelerates a reaction while it remains itself unchanged. Without the catalyzer, the atoms are stubbornly individualistic and refuse to combine readily, but once the catalyzer has been introduced, this passivity gives way to immediate activity. Hydrogen and oxygen, for example, do not combine with appreciable speed when exposed at ordinary temperature to a light radiation of 2537 frequency, but the addition of a small amount of mercury vapor brings about rapid combination.

In the realm of feelings and thoughts, music is the supreme and infallible catalyzer. Always unchanging in its composed forms and in its essence, it induces profound changes within the spirit of man. Introduced into the plexus of consciousness, it has a stimulative action as mysterious as it is inevitable. Under its influence moods are altered, perplexities are simplified, dubieties are resolved and morale is strengthened. Upon each person it acts in a different way, as a mathematical constant affects different equations, and its action is invariably ameliorative.

Deterrents to depression, the catalyzing concerts at the Water Gate have but one shortcoming—they are given only twice a week. The ideal schedule would be a concert every unclouded night, and at the rate Washingtonians are taking advantage of their opportunities, the attainment of that ideal is discernible in the distance.

Hitler's Terms.

THE TIME has come to recognize the existence of German minorities in certain areas of the United States, notably in New Jersey and specifically in the Yorkville section of New York City, and to head off trouble with Adolf Hitler by concessions to them. Otherwise Hitler eventually will send his armies in to complete the task of his political agents, whose work already is well advanced through the hyphen-American Bunds, and these districts may be seized by force as Austria was.

PEGLER.

In that event our national prestige and pride will be badly damaged and the American minorities residing in these predominantly German neighborhoods will be punished as fiercely as the Austrian non-Nazis are today. We should placate the German minorities at any sacrifice.

The terms upon which this may be effected without bloodshed may be read in the demands which have been presented to the government of Czechoslovakia on behalf of Hitler's minority there.

• • • •

FIRST—These German sections in our country must have complete territorial autonomy. Yorkville, a neighborhood in the city of New York, for example, must be recognized as an independent German state within the United States.

Second—These German sections must be permitted to have their own armed police, organized on military lines, and the police of New York City must be withdrawn and kept out of Yorkville. The frontiers of Yorkville may be fortified against the United States, if the Nazis so desire, and members of the American minority who remain in Yorkville must accept the status of aliens, subject to the usual restrictions placed on foreigners in Germany.

Third—These German sections shall be indemnified by the United States for any damage which they may believe they have suffered since 1918 through the imposition of the American form of government on their people.

Fourth—The male youths of these sections shall receive Nazi premilitary training, so that if they should join the American Army or Navy they would join as Nazis, loyal to Hitler, drilled to the minute in treachery against the United States and qualified to act as spies and saboteurs in the service of the Reich.

Fifth—They shall have the right to impose additional taxes, especially on the members of the American minority in their midst.

Sixth—There shall be full equality of national languages in the United States to the end that German may be made by law the official language of these districts of Jersey and New York City. Children of the American minority in the schools shall learn German, and the courts and all official records shall be conducted in that tongue.

Seventh—All American officials holding public positions in these areas shall be discharged and Nazi substitutes shall be named by Adolf Hitler. Elsewhere, where there is a scattering of Nazis but not a majority, Nazi officials shall be named in proportion to numbers—not Americans of German descent nor honestly naturalized Germans but Nazi Germans.

• • • •

AS AN eighth condition, not stated but implied in the terms which Hitler has presented to the national government of Czechoslovakia, all members of these Nazi minorities in our country shall have the full citizenship rights of Americans while giving their allegiance to Hitler.

This last condition need not be pressed because most of the Nazis of the Hitler minority now make a practice of taking out American citizenship in order that they may organize American societies under the Nazi banner and work for Hitler in the guise of Americans.

Hitler's political agents think this is the best way, and probably it is, because his minority in Austria claimed Austrian citizenship and its benefits while preparing to betray the country to Berlin. The Nazis in Czechoslovakia have done the same. Thus also the Nazis and young Nazis may hold military drills, goose-stepping and heiling Hitler under the American flag, and when criticized for this may swear that they are loyal Americans and were only holding a patriotic parade under their constitutional right of freedom to assemble.

There may be some Americans who will object to this proposal, but the sensible way will be to recognize that Hitler often has proclaimed that wherever any considerable body of Nazis are there is Germany and avowed his determination to redeem all his minorities in time. Our case is no different from that of Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Franco's National Syndicates

Adaptations Of Guilds Ordered By Spanish Generalissimo.

By Joseph P. Thorning, Ph. D.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

JUST AS the Falange-Requete Party is meant to serve as a link between the government and the people in Nationalist Spain, so the national syndicates are intended to act as the keystone between the state and its twin pillars, industry and agriculture.

The syndicates, composed of both employers and workers, are an adaptation of the medieval guilds to the needs of modern society. More particularly they are a reaction against the exclusiveness and mutual antagonism that has grown up between capital and labor.

National syndicalism aims to reconcile the two camps. In case of a dispute about wages or working conditions the representatives of all interested parties, including the consumers, are empowered by law to establish proper norms for each industry. In the guild system this practice was highly successful, yielding rich returns in peace and wealth to the master workman, journeymen and apprentices who made up the organization. Instead of class conflict there was class co-operation. The advocates of national syndicalism in Spain claim that it provides one big union of both capitalists and workingmen for each branch of industry, vested with legal authority to determine output, prices, wages and profits.

Miners of North Already Organized.

THE WORKERS and directors of the iron and copper mines in the Asturias and the Basque provinces are already functioning on this basis. Everyone engaged in the arms industry, which in time of war has naturally assumed large proportions, has been fitted into the national syndicalist organization.

Agriculture has its separate units, handling the production of wheat, wine, olive oil, wool, meat, fruit and cork. The charter for each group has been the subject of widespread, intelligent discussion, having been adopted only after meeting the objections or requirements of both owners and laborers who sat down together to discover optimal conditions for the operation of their mutual enterprise.

Although all are guaranteed a minimum wage or a family wage, they are also rewarded according to individual contributions of talent, zeal, skill or capital. In case the wage—or price—structure of one industry impinges upon that in another, the matter is brought before a board of review, whose decision once it has been approved by the Generalissimo and his cabinet, is final. Of course, changed conditions in the domestic or foreign market may reopen the question, provided the factual basis for the new situation is clarified.

It is interesting to note that the champions of this system in Spain do not describe it as a corporation. They point out that there is a difference between the corporate system and the corporate state. The latter, they contend, is the Italian ideal, identifying the state with the corporations, dominating them, utilizing the organs of production as one more instrument of control.

Difference Told By Burgos Official.

ONE OF the most responsible officials of the Burgos government did his best to explain this difference to me. He said:

"You must not confuse our national syndicates with the Fascist corporations. In Italy there is still a deep ravine stretching between the industrialists and the laborers. In Spain we have brought representatives of both labor and capital into positions of genuine power in the important phases of production. We intend to keep them there, unhampered by politicians or bankers. Our syndicates should be able to agree among themselves and to run themselves. The state has merely the duty of general supervision. If it interferes at every point, why have intermediary organizations at all? The government will have its hands full with the ordinary tasks of administration and foreign policies. We can perform the economic tasks of the country. If the state continues to keep good order, our syndicates can create, conserve and distribute wealth. Politics and business don't mix well. Too much revenue sticks to the fingers of parasites, favorites and flatterers. We have seen enough of that in Spain."

"Didn't the guilds in Brussels or Bruges function without interference from the municipal authorities in the Middle Ages," he inquired. "It is our plan to have two assemblies, one political and the other socio-economic, just as in Portugal. We think that Dr. Oliveira Salazar has produced a good working-model of the corporative system. He still has a legislative chamber, occupying itself with purely political matters. He also has his economic council which supervises the work of the guilds. So far, there has been no serious conflict about jurisdiction. And prices are almost as reasonable as those which prevail in Spain!"

IN A SPANISH AMMUNITION FACTORY.

Credit and Money A Problem for Franco.

THIS IMMEDIATELY raises the question of credit and money. How has it been possible for Gen. Franco, without a penny of gold reserve, to finance a war and maintain the pre-war level of prices? The members of the Barcelona government tried the same thing without success. The Nationalist peseta, as has often been remarked, has three or four times the purchasing power of a peseta (its rival) that is backed by gold and negotiable securities.

If you walk along the streets of Saragossa you will occasionally be startled by signs in store windows which read:

"This establishment has been punished by a fine for having charged abusive prices," or,

"The proprietor of this shop has been fined for refusing to sell an article that he actually had in stock."

Confidence, reinforced by strict control, has maintained the buying power of the Franco peseta. Early in the war a decree stabilized the price structure at the level which prevailed in Spain on July 18, 1936. Few variations from this norm have been permitted. Then, too, Gen. Franco controlled the chief sources of food supply, the rich grain-producing region of Extremadura, the plains of Castille and Aragon, the Andalusian reservoir of vegetables and fruits. Rents, usually a lucrative source of profiteering in wartime, have been kept to almost ridiculously low rates. Clothing alone showed a tendency to lift its price, reflecting the loss of the output from the textile mills in Catalonia.

Currency Closely Counted at Borders.

TEN MONTHS ago, when I entered Nationalist Spain on an earlier visit, I made conventional declaration of money in my possession. It was a simple, informal process. This year all that was changed. Every item of currency was noted in my passport. Checks and letters of credit were also included. Then, these instruments could be converted into pesetas only by virtue of a most elaborate ceremony. I have known friends, unfamiliar with Spanish, who spent the better part of a forenoon in this transaction. It is even necessary to state the purpose for which the pesetas are required. And every money transfer is noted in the passport.

Currency restrictions are notable in many countries of Europe at the present time. It may be doubted whether any control is quite as severe as that which is operative in Spain. Penalties for violation of the least of these requirements, at least in the case of Spaniards, are most drastic. It effectively discourages any smuggling or illicit barter in money that might tend to undermine the Nationalist financial position.

Naturally, much of the machinery of the new state is still in its embryonic stage, especially in the newly occupied territories. The last time I visited Teruel, for example, workmen were still removing corpses in an advanced stage of decomposition from the ruins of the seminary and from a number of the houses.

With the odor of death in the air it was premature, to say the least, to expect that the headquarters of the national syndicalist organization would be operating at a peace-time tempo. Few civilians had been able to return to their homes in this provincial capital, where practically every dwelling had been hit by one or more shells. Belchite, which witnessed some of the fiercest fighting in the war, is in the same condition of ruin. Millions of pesetas will have to be expended in these two places alone in order to restore the ordinary public services of water, drainage, heat and light.

Strong Urge Noted To Restore Monarchy.

EVERYWHERE in Spain there is speculation about the probabilities in favor of a restoration of kingship. To the best of my knowledge there is a strong traditional urge to bring back royalty as a symbol of national unity. The generals who have won brilliant reputations at the front, like Garcia Valino and Camillo Alonso, make no secret of their predictions for a Spanish King worthy of the name. When I interviewed the former at his artillery observation post, during the hard drive through the Sierra Espadan, I noticed that he wore only one insignia, the coat-of-arms of Navarre, surmounted by a crown woven in strands of gold.

Generalissimo Franco himself is known to favor Prince Juan, the youngest son of Alfonso XIII. The latter is the least likely to succeed himself. His precipitate flight in April, 1931, before the full results of the municipal elections were known, lost him that aura of divinity, which Shakespeare says should "hedge a king."

In case Prince Juan ascends the throne he will certainly not be an absolute monarch. In the words of Thiers, the famous French statesman, it will be a case where "le roi regne, mais il ne gouverne pas." (The king reigns, but he does not govern.) The self-respecting president of a Republic like our own would probably reject an office of such limited powers.

It may be doubted whether any monarch will be able to cement and hold together the various factions which have subordinated their individual preferences in order to form the Nationalist army with the same degree of success as has Gen. Franco. Much against his will he may find himself obliged to act as supreme co-ordinator and administrator. In that case he may become in name what he already is in fact: "Le roi est le pays comme homme." (The King is the country personified as a man.) It would not be the first time in history that a soldier discovered the impossibility of relinquishing the scepter of power.

Reconstruction Task Seen To Be Formidable.

IN ANY EVENT, numerous problems of the most pressing character await the future ruler of Spain. It took 20 years to rebuild Rheims Cathedral. Reconstruction beyond the Pyrenees cannot wait until 1958. It will require whole-hearted co-optration from the whole people. Particularism, heretofore the curse of Spain, must be definitely discarded. Politicians and ambitious, bureaucratic careerists must be curbed. There is generosity and enlightenment enough in the Spanish character to accomplish the task to perfection.

When I say this, I have a vivid recollection of two episodes that stand out among all my impressions of Spain throughout the past two years. The first is the image of a nurse, tending 500 Republican prisoners, in the best hospital in Saragossa. On her breast was a medal with four golden stripes signifying that on four distinct occasions she had given her blood to be transfused into the veins of the men on cots about her, one or more of whom may have been responsible for the death of her husband and two children in Madrid.

"They are Spaniards and Christians," she said, "and they all love Spain as well as I."

The second impression which gives me hope for the invincibility of Franco's Spain in peace as well as in war is the figure of Gen. Garcia Valino, standing on a cliff facing the Espadan mountain range, the last natural barrier which stood between his soldiers and Sagunto.

"Isn't it a tough obstacle, general?" I hazarded.

"Certainly, it is," Valino replied, "but there are no obstacles too great for the Army of Navarre!"

Mystery Man

By Lewis Gannett

Who Is This B. Traven?

AN ENGLISHMAN named Symons wrote a good book about his search for the life history of the strange fanatic genius and poseur who sometimes called himself Baron Corvo. Some day some one may write an equally good book about a quest for the mysterious B. Traven, whose third book to be issued in America, "The Bridge in the Jungle" (Knopf, $2.50) is published today.

For Mr. Traven's publishers insist that they do not know whether that is his real name, where he was born or what his nationality is, and, by his orders, they refuse to give out information as to his whereabouts. They cannot make capital of this mystery, for Mr. Traven writes into his contracts a stipulation that there shall be no "blurbs" and no biographical data on the jackets of his books published, and that the advertising must be restrained.

The American public, accustomed to blatant advertising, has steadfastly refused to recognize Mr. Traven's unadvertised merit. "The Death Ship," which sold 250,000 copies in Germany before it was suppressed by the Nazis, and more than 1,000,000 copies in Russia, has, I learn from the Publishers' Weekly, sold 3,288 copies in this country in four years. "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," issued in 1933, has been published in 12 countries; Americans have bought only 2,692 copies of it.

Perhaps "The Bridge in the Jungle," a slighter story than its predecessors, will sell fewer still. Perhaps the public will wake up to B. Traven, who is assuredly a writer of far greater stature than Harvey Allen, Christina Stead or others loudly touted. (I find him also more readable, in a Jack Londonish sense of the word "readable.") At any rate, Mr. Knopf, the publisher, has enough faith in Traven and in the American public to announce chastely, on that white jacket which Mr. Traven will not permit him to defile with a "blurb," that he has bought the American rights to two more of Traven's novels, "The Carreta," and "Government," and that "as soon as possible" he will publish them too.

• • • •

THERE ARE MANY MYSTERIES about B. Traven. His books appeared first in German. Two translations from the German have appeared in England. A German-American once translated "The Death Ship" for American publication, only to find that Mr. Traven had written the book in English first, and preferred his own version. Another publisher had the manuscript withdrawn from his hands when he suggested revisions. When Alfred Knopf first approached him, Traven said he did not want it to be published in America; he did not like the country; a year later, he had changed his mind.

Yet obviously he is an American. It is manifest in all three of his books, and not merely in the accident that the narrators are Americans in all three—one a story of a seaman, one a tale of a gold prospecting, and this latest the story of the death of an Indian boy and his funeral, as witnessed by an American plant collector in a Mexican jungle. Obviously he knows the ports, and the low port life, of the world; obviously also, he knows best of all the byways of Mexico. "The Publishers' Weekly" suggests that even his country of residence is a secret; Mexico would be the obvious guess, and indeed a letter addressed to Mr. Traven, at his publisher's office, three years ago, brought a very American response, from a village in Mexico not far from the snow-capped peak of the Nevada de Toluca.

Whether he is a German-American, a Scandinavian-American, or an Anglo-American I do not know. Probably he ran away young. Possibly he roamed the West in I. W. W. days; he was in New York in 1914 or thereabouts; he hates the stuffy church services of our Northern land; loathes profit-chaser, has been in Russia, distrusts reformers of all brands, and likes primitive Mexicans, but hates people who sentimentalize about them. He listens to the radio and sees movies, in Mexico; he liked "Ruggies of Red Gap." He has read Conrad and Dos Passos devoutly; I doubt that he ever had much schooling. Possibly he is being autobiographical when he makes Gerard Gales, narrator of "The Bridge in the Jungle" as he was of "The Death Ship," say that he learned to read and write, and to spell Spanish, in an Indian night school.

Whatever the origin and life course of the man, he writes with that freshness of spoken language which is the distinguishing characteristic of the livest prose of our time. Steinbeck has it; Hemingway has it; Saroyan has it; Traven has it, as authentically if not with quite the same inky fluency. There is occasionally a bit of gawkishness in his writing, as of a man unaccustomed to take time to put on paper what he would prefer to say with his mouth. But there is always a man behind the book, not merely a college graduate.

• • • •

"THE BRIDGE IN THE JUNGLE" is a story of a boy in a jungle settlement whose brother come home from Texas with a bright new pair of shoes as a gift. The shoes were his undoing. It was Carlosito's mother who first interrupted the dance in the jungle by the news of his disappearance, and it was hours before the feasters decided that hunting for a missing boy was more interesting than listening to bad music. The good musicians arrived a day late—just in time for the funeral. They played as their funeral march the latest song they had mastered, "Taintgonnarainnomo," and it seemed appropriate to Gerald Gales, in that sun-worshiping land . . . Not much plot to it; but read it, and you will remember the store-clothed Indians of that river village, much as you remember Lennie in "Of Mice and Men."

For Traven has something of Steinbeck's magic insight into simple minds. He does not sentimentalize; he does not brutalize; he never prettifies. But you see into those Indians, with their instinctive distrust of the foreigners in their midst, that unwavering faith in the supernatural, that fierce grief merging so suddenly into fatalistic acceptance of the inevitable, that cow-like solemnity which animals share with primitive men. You see into them, at the same time remaining outside, as Gerald Gales did.

As Gales-Traven remarks, one becomes a philosopher by living among people who are not of his own race and who speak a different language. Experience has taught him, however, that traveling educates only those who can be educated just as well by roaming around their own country. By walking 30 miles anywhere in one's home State the man who is open-minded will see more and learn more than a thousand others will by running around the world. A trip to a Central American jungle to watch how Indians behave near a bridge won't make you see either the jungle or the bridge or the Indians if you believe that the civilization you were born into is the only one that counts." . . . Reading "The Bridge in the Jungle," without even leaving New York, may help. Reading any of Traven's books is an experience.

So for a few weeks I relinquish this column to Mr. Edward Angly, that West Texas Frenchman, that cosmopolitan New Yorker, whose roving diligence as one of the Herald Tribune's best reporters is temporarily impaired by fractured bones.

Turns With A Bookworm

HERE'S almost the only complete solution we've ever seen for practically all of life's problems, except the final one . . . His publishers say that "Ludwig Bemelmans never stays in one place long enough for his mail to catch up with him." . . . Doubtless money could be wired him from time to time; he has sent back from Paris sketches for a new book, "Life Class," drawn from his "salad days, when he worked in a large de luxe hotel." . . . We presume the text is to follow . . . "The experience," it is said, "was educational for both employe and hotel, though of no great duration." . . .

• • • •

WE ONCE WORKED in a small and far from de luxe hotel which forever incapacitated us from writing profoundly about the working classes . . . It's so hard to make an abstraction of one's self, and all the other people were so different from each other and from us; and of course we must have been exploited and wouldn't now expect a coolie to work such hours for such pay; but still, we had such a lot of fun, and the housekeeper sternly made us study shorthand and typing for our own good and the manager lent us a typewriter, so we have no idea what it was all about . . . Lately we read in a novel about an earnest young woman who was going to Paris, on an allowance, to "study the labor problem." . . . It must be that times have changed . . . Anyhow, the girl in the story changed her mind and married a millionaire, which is an excellent solution if you can get it to do . . . We wish we had thought of that . . . Or even of going to Paris. . . . ISABEL M. PATERSON.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

And so we go into a moment of deep self-pity and introspection while mumbling: "pity Edgar Puryear, pity the pretty lady in the black dress who answers his calls, pity all the employment agencies, pity the disappointed who are seeking work, pity ourselves!

Pity the stories heard by Puryear and the lady in the black dress and the stories that come to all the employment people and to ourselves. We were thinking of all this early Saturday when two citizens, sad-faced and with a hope of employment, came to our desk, with the long-heard plea:

"How is it done? How does a man get a Federal job? We don't mean just average fellows, but men who are trained for some particular thing, who have been competent in private industry, but who are out now because private industry doesn't need them any more . . ."

And continuing: "What do you have to do? Does it require a letter from your Congressman? Do you have to see some obscurely hidden and 'right' man? Do you have to come from the right place and hit Washington at some vague and psychological moment? What must one have—an indorsement, the right appearance, the right vote, the right prayer, a recognized ability, or what?"

• • • •

The answer isn't known at this desk, though much reflection has been done, and some practical experience is in our background. So we told the two callers on Saturday morning that we didn't know—and that we didn't know where the answer could be found. But there are certain notions.

A letter from your favorite Congressman doesn't necessarily work. So many applications are in the Congressmen's mails that no reasonable man would think the Congressmen would go to bat for them all. The Congressmen undoubtedly write recommending letters for the majority of them—but the Congressmen don't go to bat for them all.

Most of the letters the Congressmen write have the tone of form communications and the employment officers can read between the lines. But that Congressmen get jobs for the most important of their constituents nobody can deny. We don't think they go about this with a letter.

Can it be that they call in person and with some secrecy on the employment agents, maybe to say: "You've gotten a lot of recommendations from me but in this case the situation is different. This man (or woman) should go in. His (or her) abilities are beyond any question, the Government needs him (or her) because all of us are interested in an efficient personnel. I have sacrificed my personal time to come here on his (or her) behalf . . ."

"We don't know whether that's the answer," said our two callers on Saturday morning. "We don't know the ritual. We ony know that our situation in life has passed the point for theorizing; something practical must be done . . ."

And continuing: "We know what the employment agents are up against and we don't say they aren't good and true men. Long lines confront their offices. They must have patience, for in the lines are men and women with letters from their Congressmen and men and women otherwise with hard luck stories to make the heart drip red. As a general thing, the employment agents are considerate men. They would give you a job if they could. And their very kindness makes them, paradoxically, unkind . . .

"We say this because none of them wants to discourage a jobseeker. So rather than discourage, they will encourage you to the point of false hope: 'You have a splendid record and are capable. It may be . . . it may be that we can use you. Not just at the moment, understand, but sometime—and maybe soon. Fill out an application there and we will see what develops, something where you will fit in to your advantage and to an efficient Government's advantage.

"So you fill in the application and go home to tell the folks that your case has engaged the Government's attention and the prospects are at least fair. You keep up the search for work, but with strongest hope pinned to that application, that surely is at somebody's fingertips and ready, at any moment, to bloom.

"But, all too often, it never blooms! Who gets the job?"

• • • •

Just now, the PWA employment agent has 165,000 applications. They say that the best qualified persons are getting jobs. They have a long re-employment list and want to hire, so far as possible, those who were let off (about 5,000) when the PWA began fading sometime ago. They are required by Executive order to rehire, whenever possible. The line of applicants is dwindling now—but "we're having a hard time," don't mistake it, they say.

Exodus of Reich's Jews Not to Start Until End of Year

By the Associated Press.

The flow of refugees which President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull are trying to set in motion from Germany cannot begin before the end of the year.

A vast amount of preparation, political and financial, must be completed before German Jews begin their exodus. Officials say 5 to 10 years will pass before the problem can be liquidated.

The inter-governmental committee which met this month at Evian, France, in response to Secretary Hull's appeal, will meet again in London, August 3 and endeavor to set up a permanent organization.

Myron C. Taylor, former head of the United States Steel Corporation, will again be the United States delegate. Quiet negotiations are contemplated with Germany to induce that government to permit her political outcasts to leave the country with some of their properties.

Under existing German regulations, Jews quitting Germany may take only 5 per cent of their wealth with them. The committee hopes Germany can be induced to let them take at least 25 per cent.

Funds to Get 400 Out of Spain Asked

A second appeal for funds to return more than 400 Americans wounded fighting for loyalist Spain was issued yesterday by Edward Young, executive secretary of the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade.

It will cost $125 to return each boy from Spain, where hospitalization is poor, or from France.

Saratoga Draws Society For Month of Racing

Season Opens Today and Influx Already Has Begun to Swell Population of the Adirondack Village Twice Its Normal Size.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Saratoga's big season starts today, and from now until the end of summer the most colorful sporting-society news of the year will come out of that snappy little town in the foothills of the Adirondacks. The influx of society folk, racing fans, entertainers, jockeys, trainers and what-not already has swelled the population to twice its normal size and on August week-ends when special trains and busses from New York bring in additional thousands, the village will assume the aspects of a city.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Although Saratoga Springs made its name and fame as a sports and spa center, its social schedule has, from the begining, been every bit as important as its racing calendar. George H. Bull, president of the Saratoga Racing Association, in recent years has set the pace by giving a series of parties shortly before the races begin and by attending almost all the important ones through the season. In keeping with his custom, he entertained at a dinner Saturday night, when his guest lists included a number of the most important persons who will hit Saratoga this season.

By the end of this week many social notables and turf followers who haven't missed a season at Saratoga in years will be settled there to spend the next five weeks. Mrs. Dodge Sloane, of New York, will arrive there today to take over the country home she purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson.

Virginia Hunt Country To Be Well Represented

Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, of Middleburg and New York, is already there and expects to remain through August. John Hay Whitney will open his farm home near Saratoga this week and may be joined there later by Mrs. Whitney, who recently has been spending most of her time in Hollywood.

Former Representative and Mrs. Parker Corning, of Albany, N. Y., are among boxholders at the Saratoga race track, as are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Friendly, of Middleburg, and Mr. and Mrs. William B. Street, of Warrenton. The hunting country will further be represented at Saratoga this season by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. White and the latter's daughter, Miss Bettina Belmont.

Arthur G. Vanderbilt and his bride of a few weeks also are on the list of boxholders. William Woodward, chairman of the famous Jockey Club, and Richard F. Howe, who will race an important stable, will arrive in Saratoga this afternoon. They have leased a home there for the season and plan to entertain frequently.

The Golf Club at the resort has almost as many members as the racing set, and the clubhouse today will be the scene of scores of luncheon parties. This afternoon there will be a tea for members of the club and guests. An annual event, this serves as a sort of annual reunion for important persons converging on Saratoga from all parts of the country.

Famous Spa Has Colorful History

Starting out as a health resort back in the latter part of the eighteenth century, Saratoga has as glamorous a history as any seasonal center in the United States. Its fame stemmed from the fact that when the British General, Sir William Johnson, was wounded in the defense of Fort William Henry, he was instructed by the Indians to drink from High Rock Springs. He did . . . and straightway became its first full-fledged publicity agent.

But although the healing powers of the water became widely known, and hotel after hotel was built to accommodate visitors, the resort passed its prime in the fifties. Then, under growing sectional feeling, its Southern patronage gradually diminished. After the Civil War it regained some of its former Southern customers and was enjoying a brief renaissance when Newport began to rise in favor and took most of its moneyed trade.

A handful of sportsmen, however, saved the day for Saratoga and its race track. They organized the Saratoga Association for the Improvement of the Breed of Horses, which today is known only by the first part of its title. To that group goes the credit for rescuing the spa from oblivion and building the prestige of a resort that has color, distinction and social and political celebrities all over the place through each August.

Once referred to as the "cradle of fashion and intrigue, rendezvous of lacqueys and jockeys," the famous resort manages to more than hold its own against other playgrounds of the rich. Its chief rival is Newport, although the latter would never admit it. Last year, however, so many colonists at the Rhode Island resort took off to Saratoga for the month of August that rumors went the rounds Newport might build a race track of its own. This report, however, was hotly denied by Newport authorities, who declared they had no desire for a race track, no need for one, and no intention of running competition with Saratoga in any respect.

R. L. Sullivan Newport Guest of Fahnestocks

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, of Washington, who are spending the summer at Newport, R. I., have as their guest Robert L. Sullivan, of New York.

Also in Newport are Baron Herve de Gruben, Counselor of the Belgian Embassy, and Baroness de Gruben, who are at the Viking.

Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Favies and Charles Beck were week-end guests of Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt in Newport.

Mrs. Kennedy Goes to Cannes

Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, wife of the United States Ambassador, accompanied by five of her children, left London Friday for Cannes, France, where they will spend the remainder of the summer. Mr. Kennedy, who is remaining in London for a couple of weeks, plans to join his family early in August, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Kathleen Kennedy. Miss Rosemary Kennedy left yesterday for a visit in Ireland, planning to go to Cannes later.

Prior to leaving London, Mrs. Kennedy entertained at a number of small luncheons at the embassy. One of her biggest parties was given Tuesday of last week, when her honor guest was Cardinal Hinsley. Others in the party included the Countess of Gainsborough, Viscount Dawson of Penn, Lord and Lady Howard of Penrith, High Commissioner for Canada and Mrs. Vincent Massey, Lady Maureen Noel and Lady Winifride Elwes.

On the same day, Mrs. Kennedy entertained the practice squadron of United States midshipmen at a tea dance, at which Miss Rosemary Kennedy assisted in receiving.

Houston Niller To Make Debut Here in Autumn

Former Holton Arms Student Also to Bow in Memphis.

Another name has been added to the list of debutantes for the coming season. Miss Houston Niller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Niller, of 3312 N street, is one of the latest to decide to make her bow this year. She will be presented both in Washington and in Memphis, whree her mother and her grandmother also were debutantes.

Miss Niller attended Holton Arms School here and spent the past year studying at the Semple School in New York. She is now in Alabama attending a house party. En route she stopped to visit friends in Atlanta, where her parents formerly lived. While in Georgia she was extensively entertained. Among those who gave parties in her honor were Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson, sr., Mrs. Emily Head, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Cram and Miss Harriet Donaldson.

When she concludes her visit in Alabama, Miss Niller will go to Greenwich, Conn., to spend some time, returning to Washington early in September.

While Miss Niller definitely has decided to make her bow next winter, plans for the date have not yet been completed. Like most Memphis buds, she will be presented at the Debutante Ball at the Chickasaw Club in November, and probably she will spend that entire month in Memphis. Whether she will make her curtsy here in October or wait until December has not yet been decided.

Mrs. Niller, the former Miss Houston Westbrook, was living with her parents in Santa Monica, Calif., the year of her debut, but since her mother had been presented in Memphis, she also went back to the Southern city to make her bow.

Envoy to Get Praise on Chaco

Representatives of the Peoples Mandate Committee will call on the Charge d'Affairs of the Paraguayan Legation, Pablo M. Insfran, at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning to extend felicitations on the signing of the peace treaty by Bolivia and Paraguay recently in Buenos Aires. The interview will take place at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the Mandate Committee, says the delegation to the Paraguayan representative will express appreciation of the enlightened statesmanship of the leaders of Paraguay and Bolivia that has brought about this peaceful settlement and saved the peoples of the two republics from war.

In announcing the delegation, Miss Vernon said the business of the Mandate Committee is to create and express public opinion, and its members were naturally grateful when Secretary of State at the Pan-American Union celebration of the Chaco peace said that "the singing of the treaty would have been impossible without a powerful public opinion in all our nations insistent upon the abolishment of war as an instrument of international policy."

The committee has collected over two million signatures in the American republics to the mandate to end war.

Among those who will meet the Paraguayan Charge d'Affaires are Miss Vernon, Mrs. Cecil Ira McReynolds, Miss Gertrude Crocker, treasurer of the Mandate Committee; Mrs. J. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For two years I have had a "best girl friend." We have been very close pals, have confided in each other and have traded clothes. She comes from a family that is a little better off than mine, has always had just about everything she wants and as a result has become very selfish. She wants her own way all the time and cannot stand to be in the background in any group. She is quite popular with boys, more than I am, but she doesn't go with any boy very long, as they all say she is "too much of a spoiled brat." Other girls don't seem to be able to get along with her because they say she is too concerned with herself and doesn't give a darn for anybody else.

I have a good many other girl friends but they don't like to go anywhere or do anything with me if she is going to be along. She doesn't like them either, and on several occasions has been rather sarcastic to them, which hurt me. She realizes that she is selfish, but isn't going to change, because she says if people don't like her, well, she doesn't like them, either.

• • • •

When boys are around, she talks so much that I have no desire to compete with her. But when she is not around I seem to be able to hold my own very well. Many of my boy friends tell me I should stop going with her as she sort of leads me around. They say (and girls say the same thing) that I'm entirely different when not with her. One of my closest friends—a boy—says she cramps my style and that I have much more personality when she isn't around. On the other hand, when she and I are together, we can have lots of fun. She is very loyal and would stick to me through thick and thin.

• • • •

Miss Haworth, should I give up this friendship? I must do it entirely or not at all, as she is the type of person who wants her friends around her all the time, or else she thinks they're not her friends. Should I frankly tell her I think we should break up this friendship? My mother thinks I should, because, she says, my friend is rather domineering and makes me quiet as a mouse when I am with her. It isn't really that bad, but when boys are around I just can't compete with her. Please give me the benefit of your advice.

Sincerely, UNCERTAIN.

See Less of Her.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Without offering any blunt excuses to this girl (in the beginning, at least), you should, for your own personality's and social salvation's sake, as well as in loyalty to your many other friends of both sexes, fight yourself clear of the extremely selfish claims she has staked upon your time and devotion. Friendship is, or should be, a reciprocally give-and-take proposition, and when an association tacitly demands that one give all and the other take all—as seems to be the case in your relationship with this girl—it can hardly be regarded as friendship. It is merely one individual's exploitation of another individual for purely selfish motives of one-sided aggrandizement and personal satisfaction.

• • • •

Everyone who has the faculty of surrounding himself with many friends is called upon to deal with the problem of keeping certain of his friends apart from certain other of his friends. He does this by budgeting his time evenly amongst all of them, bringing together in groups those who are congenial, and making other occasions for seeing those who wouldn't fit into a particular group.

• • • •

Of course, there are individuals who possess—or at least profess—the ability to live without the approval of the majority of those with whom their lives are allied by propinquity, social background and similarity of interests or pursuits, and your erstwhile "best friend" may really be that sort of person. But if you aren't—and you don't seem to be, as witness your real concern with the opinions of your other friends pertaining to this girl—then you are making a mistake in identifying yourself so closely with her and all she stands for socially.

• • • •

I think you should immediaetly inaugurate a social program designed to strengthen the ties of your friendships in all directions, without showing special favoritism to this girl. Take the initiative in getting in touch with other girls and make engagements with them which do not include your "very best friend." Then, if she suggests a counter-plan, remark casually that you are going to be doing such-and-such a thing with so-and-so on that particular morning, afternoon or evening, and that you hadn't suggested her joining you because you knew she didn't like the other girl or girls.

• • • •

I think, too, that you should hereafter make arrangements to see your beaux without her being present—in the majority of instances, at least. After all, self-preservation is the first law of nature, and the normal life program of any girl should include, first, a broad circle of well-loved, deeply appreciated friends, and, secondly, happy marriage. You aren't giving yourself a chance to promote such a program in permitting yourself to be overshadowed and shunted into the background so far as boys are concerned; nor in suffering the greater number of your girl friends to be alienated because of your stubborn allegiance to a selfish girl whose conduct cannot rightfully be championed.

• • • •

You are definitely entitled to order your life to suit yourself, and if this girl objects; denies you that right; maintains that it must be all or nothing; that you must choose between her society first, last and all the time, and the privilege of seeing your other friends when you would like, or they would like—then tell her the decision is hers; that you are sorry she feels that way about it; that you would like to keep her in your life as your first-best friend, but that in fairness to yourself and others whose society you enjoy and whose devotion you appreciate and are willing to work to keep, you simply cannot keep her—on her terms, which mean sacrificing all your other friends—as your one-and-only friend.

• • • •

With all your friends, boys and girls alike, and even your mother, united in the belief that excessive association with this girl is bound to have—and, indeed, is already having—a detrimental effect upon your personality and social life, one is reminded of the slang slogan, "Fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong." Their concern for you, and their suggestions as to how to remedy the situation (namely, by seeing considerably less of the young lady) are surely deserving of gravest consideration. M. H.

For Inspiring 'How-Cool-You-Look' Comment

THE WHITE organdy dress below with red patent strips that whirl around the hem and appear on the sleeve puffs will make everyone who looks at it feel a bit cooler on a sultry night. There's a perky quality about it that revives languid spirits. Worn by Cecilia Parker, movie actress.

Beat in 3 egg yolks and ¼ teaspoon almond extract. Beat 3 egg whites until stiff; then gradually beat in ¾ cup honey. Add dry ingredients and 2-3 cup of milk to butter mixture, alternately, beginning and ending with flour and beating until smooth after each addition. Thoroughly fold in the egg whites and pour into 2 buttered 8-inch cake tins. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30 minutes.

Cream 4 tablespoons butter and gradually beat in 2¾ cups confectioners' sugar, alternately with 6 to 8 cups crushed raspberries, until of spreading consistency. Frost cake and decorate with cup raspberries. Yields 12 portions.

Gelatin Mold Hints.

To make fancy molds of gelatin with several layers of different colors and flavors see that one layer is thoroughly stiff before adding the next. If you use fruits or vegetables for designs, press them into the firm gelatin so they will stay in place when the gelatin is unmolded.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 24.

THIS WEEK all roads abruptly stop leading to Radio City or Coney Island and point straight to Saratoga, where the healing waters are. But few of our girls think of the up-State Spa as anything but the glorious old town where the hosses run during the month of August — surrounded by solid-gold Americans and by the strangest assortment of burglars and chiselers to be found anywhere in the United States.

ALICE HUGHES

Saratoga during race month is unique. It is a weird combination of its lovely main street, lined with arching trees and those fabulous and enormous frame hotels, like the United States and the the Grand Union—its exquisite old track—and an enormous convention of touts, tipsters, bookmakers, two-dollar horse players, minor gangsters, slit-eyed gamblers raked up from all the shady alleys of the Eastern United States. And its charm is all-compelling, and a visit to the Spa during race month is an experience well worth the time, effort and petty cash handed hopelessly to the heavy-faced men in the betting ring. I love it and I pray that I may spend at least a week-end there next month.

Saratoga is a great rallying place for the girls, too. Many of the very young ones may give it a miss (especially since young Al Vanderbilt got himself married), but the great ladies of the American turf are on hand. Mrs. Dodge Sloan, owner of the Brookmeade Stable and its "Calvalcade," is a handsome regular, and so, usually is "Liz" Whitney, wife of Jock. If Mrs. Randolph Scott, the duPont heiress, canevade her Coast divorce worries from Randolph of the films, she, too, will be at the Spa. There's a charm and excitement about Saratoga, from now till Labor Day, that's irresistible. Try to make it, if you can.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I learn with little surprise that Astronomer I. M. Levitt says he has already counted 200 spots on the sun, and will probably find more. That, of course, is what is causing all the sad didoes in the world, and if Old Sol goes to 300, we'd better sell and start all over again. Sun-spots are the greatest blame-takers we've known since the First World War, on which was blamed the ruin of two whole generations—the soldiers and the flaming youths who followed the screen patterns of Clara Bow and Colleen Moore . . .

Made-to-Order Shade Offered For All Rooms

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

YOU MAY not have an old apple tree to shade your domain, but there doesn't seem to be any reason why you can't achieve deep shade in all forms of summer living.

Take, for example, porch awnings. Once these were fairly standard and your only decision was whether you'd have red and green stripes (narrow) or orange and green stripes (wide). Those days are gone forever. You can have wide, flat awnings with the stripes in a herring-bone pattern—particularly nice on a white clapboard house if you choose blue and white striped canvas. For a long, low house, try awnings running vertically to accentuate the long lines of the house. Plain-colored awnings in yellow, rust, green or blue are pets of ours, too.

If you desire cave-like coolness, there is nothing quite like porch shades to achieve the effect. If privacy is your wish, you can have the entire porch hung with these slat-type shades, which come in several color combinations—natural, brown or green. You can cut out the rather unprepossessing view of the driveway and garage with one screen, only allowing a view of the garden to greet you and your visitors. For a large porch it's quite possible to divide the space into "rooms" with these screens, with perhaps a dining space at one end—or even a sleeping porch for the more rugged members of the family.

And then, of course, there are plenty of summer blinds for the windows as well as the porches. Since we do not all have air-conditioning (yet), many homemakers must guard their homes against excessive heat by dimming the interiors and locking in coolness. Slat-type blinds, which now may be finished in intriguing decorator's colors, are fine ways to achieve that cool, summary effect.

By Genevieve Reynolds

IF YOU would impress your best beau, look crisp and cool on a hot summer day. For the highest compliment he can think or say is to tell you that you look cool. That to him is synonymous with beauty and chic—especially if he's miserably mopping a sweltering brow.

Colors, fabrics and accessories determine whether or not you will give the impression of coolness or unnecessary warmth. White, ice blue, aqua, turquoise, peacock green and pastel shades are the cool colors. Small prints and polka dots on a light background give a cool effect. Even black and navy blue can make you appear cool when worn with light, crisp accessories. Contrasts in black and white or navy blue and white are strikingly cool looking.

Black sheers, dotted swiss, linens and pique are the epitome of cool smartness when accented with crisp trimmings and accessories. Light dotted swiss or organdie jabots, white organdie collars and cuffs, white linen, pique or broad cloth trimmings are other means of adding crispness to dark summer frocks.

Fabrics are also a deciding factor for or against a cool appearance. Net, dotted Swiss, pique, eyelet embroidery, organdie, linens and broad cloth are the crisp materials. Chiffon, voile, organzas and other sheers are the cool, clinging varities. The crisp materials look even cooler than the sheers when they are truly crisp and clean. Hospital nurses' white starched uniforms give them a cool, poised, tranquil appearance. This is the same effect that you should strive for in your own appearance if you'd look the part of a serene goddess in spite of a boiling sun.

Accessories that give a cool touch are linen, pique, string crochet gloves; airy mesh, light straw, crochet, linen or pique pocketbooks; straw shoes, mesh sandals, white perforated slippers, open-toed or toeless and heelless sandals.

Summer jewelry should also be light in weight and color. Frosted, pastel beads in an open-link chain or a double chain bracelet hung with cool white leaves of acetate composition emphasize individuality and coolness. Pins, clips, bracelets, earrings, flower petals in lacey white metal, green leaves in glass and white china beads are other new styles designed for summer coolness.

Keep the lines and details of your dresses simple. Fussiness of detail detracts from the cool effect. And above all keep clothes and body absolute immaculate, otherwise you will be just another person struggling in the heat instead of presenting a picture of cool distinction.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Old Remedies Found Best For Arthritis in New Tests

I HAVE BEEN attending the annual meeting of the American Medical Association in San Francisco. Although this report will reach my readers somewhat late to be classified as news, it is worth while to review the meeting because here is assembled everything that is new in medical science.

Among the papers of interest was the report on chronic rheumatism. There has been so much talk about new remedies that it was refreshing to hear Dr. Dawson, of New York, recommend a few old tried and true methods that are not expensive nor difficult to obtain.

He divided the methods of treatment of arthritis into three categories—first, the remedies of proved value; second, the remedies of doubtful value; and third, the remedies of no value. In the first division, the remedies of proved value, he listed rest, psychotherapy, the use of salicylate drugs, such as aspirin, heat and physical measures, splinting and other orthopedic treatment, and climate. Under the treatment of doubtful value he listed removal of focal infections, such as teeth and tonsils, and special diet of any kind. Of no value, he said, were vaccines, any drugs except those designed to relieve pain, bee-venom therapy, sulfanide, sunshine, sulphur and several others familiar to the victims of this malady. It was a refreshing breeze of honesty after all the compound bunk we have heard about the treatment of arthritis.

Advance in the treatment of diabetes was reported by the use of crystalline insulin. When insulin was first used over 10 years ago, it was obtained from the extract of the pancreatic gland. Now they can make it in pure crystalline form like any other chemical. In the treatment of severe diabetes with crystalline insulin.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Paging Mrs. DeGoofey.

(Editor's note—In the absence on vacation of Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, this department presents some of the appeals that the league has recently received concerning public problems.)

Down With the Dirndl!

My Dear Mrs. DeGoofey:

I am writing to urge that your league take action concerning the peasant costume situation. On every hand I see our lovely, refined young American girls appearing in these offensive peasant outfits which are worn only by the very lowest classes in Europe. I think this is a very undemocratic as well as unbecoming custom. Moreover, it seems to me that unfortunately enough of our women already look like peasants, so why should they make matters worse? Besides these dirndls do such dreadful things to the hips. Cannot youf league stage a public bonfire of all peasant attire—especially the bandannas? GERALDINE.
(Mrs. Channing H. P. Burlappe)

Dear Henrietta DeGoofey:

I have shopped all summer for a negligee or housecoat that was not adapted for resort wear at the North Pole. Why, oh why can't your league stop manufacturers from turning slip covers, window drapes and summer laprobes into housecoats? Why can't it induce somebody to design some kind of cool thin attire (and by that I don't mean any silk or chiffon temptress gowns) for wear in the kitchen in July? (Mrs.) PEGGY HACK.

Sun Worshipers.

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey,
President, The Do Something About It League.

Dear Madam:

Why doesn't your organization take some action against these suntan persons who every wek-end are turning our Nation's Capital into a nudists' camp? My entire Sundays are ruined by watching these people on an adjacent apartment roof. I noticed one man there—I would be ashamed to tell you how little he had on—from the time I got up until it was too dark for me to see. A lot of young women were there too, shamelessly turning themselves into squaws. I can't see how men find them attractive. I am tired also of listening to people everywhere I go talk about their sun tan. It is bad enough to have to look at it—let alone hear about it.
ADELAIDE OTTER MIFFIN.

Human Mosquitoes.

Dear Mrs. DeGoofey: Here is a suggestion for the Do Something About It League. Why not hold a hot weather pogrom and get rid of all of the following:

Women who are downtown in velvet hats and black crepe dresses when the humidity is up to 95.

All entrants in beauty contests.

Between-trainers on vacations who call you up to tell you that somebody said for them to tell you "Hello!"

Visitors who didn't tell you they were coming for fear you would go to "a lot of trouble."

Men who tell you what Chamberlain ought to do; men who tell you what Roosevelt ought to do; men who tell you what anybody ought to do.

People who tell you that summer has hardly set in yet and from all signs it's going to be an old-fashioned scorcher well up into September. JADED JENNIE.

Gold Chain Used As Shoulder Straps

Paris (U.P.)—There is something about links and the ensuing chains which always add a smart touch to a gown, whether the gown be for evening or daytime wear. Bruyere offers an excellent idea for the shoulder straps on a severely straight black evening gown. The straps are simply double gold metal chains—quite fine—which terminate in two gold leaves where the "strap" meets the decolletage.

Another variation of the chain idea, within anyone's dressmaking ability, is the belt which Jean Desses puts on a pale hyacinth silk afternoon dress. The belt is made by a dozen links of tubing formed of the same material as the dress.

Sports Selected Should Contrast 'Office' Routine

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHEN YOU try to combine golf and business, you are unlikely to get as much out of your game, and if you are one of those tired businessmen who work under pressure a good part of the time, you need to relax. It is a good idea to play with someone you do not have to impress.

Your recreation should be as much in contrast to your work as possible, and for the average businessman golf offers more advantages than any other game. It takes you out in the fresh air, enables you to use more oxygen and is conducive to complete relaxation. To induce relaxation, your exercises must be fairly mild and be continued over a long period of time. When you consider that it takes about two hours of walking to draw the blood away from the brain and nerve centers, you can understand why this game is so ideal for the hard-pressed businessman.

As far as exercise goes, golf is not the best in the world. In only fifteen minutes of setting-up exercises you can put your muscles through as thorough a workout as in two hours on the course, and the fat man will find this recreation an aid to his reducing program. It uses very few calories in comparison to the time you spend at it. If you walk at the rate of 2½ miles per hour, you burn about 1.30 calories per pound body weight per hour, and in playing 18 holes you walk between 4 and 5 miles. Even when you walk at the rate of 3¾ miles per hour, you burn only 1.95 calories per pound per hour. Your additional calorie allowance for golf shots would not increase the number of calories used in walking by more than 10 per cent. Assuming that you weigh 165 pounds and play 18 holes, you would use around 500 calories.

That is not many calories compared to the number you take in food and drink. A large whiskey and soda at the ninteenth hole supplies you with 300 calories—just enough to put such an edge on your appetite that you tuck away from 1,000 to 1,500 calories more at lunch or dinner. Under those conditions you can gain weight on golf. Before we get off the subject of food, a word of caution: As a health measure, you should wait 1½ hours after lunch before you begin play.

Even the professional golfer finds the game insufficient exercise to ward off a corporation front and they take specific exercises for the abdominal muscles. For this purpose you will find most effective the exercises which forcibly retract the abdominal wall, as in the following:

POSITION: Lying on the floor, feet resting on heavy piece of furniture, about 2 feet from floor, knees straight.

MOVEMENT: Raise the hips off the floor until the body is in a straight line from feet to chest. Slowly lower the hips to the floor. Inhale as hips are raised and exhale as they are lowered. Repeat 6, later 12 times. After you are in condition you may repeat the exercise as many as 60 times, relaxing and resting after each 20 counts.

Out door recreation to induce relaxation and regular exercises to keep the abdominal muscles in tone help to keep the businessman from feeling the strain.

Paris Coiffures Climb Higher, Higher, Higher

Paris (U.P.)—Every head must go up, and the higher the better. The most popular coiffure method is to gather all the hair into a cluster of curls on top of the head. Then there is the sausage roll high off the forehead with a matching sausage high on the back of the head, leaving a comparatively flat area on the very top. Jewels make luxurious substitutes for little combs in evening coiffures. Ribbons are discreetly tied and twisted on the head for daytime occasions.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

THOUGHTS WHILE FISHING OFF GALAPAGOS.

Barstow, Calif., July 24, 1938.

Alone at last. Well, here's a chance to think things over. Funny that no one ever guesses what goes through a President's mind. It's all so clear to the grandstand quarterbacks. The millenium before supper. Gotta save 'em all over again.

• • • •

What a relief not to be waving and grinning at crowds. I guess you kinda like it though, Frank, part of the job. But the way they analyze it you'd think waving and smiling were a brand-new abracadabra. What a lot of tommyrot they write.

• • • •

They're as much at sea as I am, but maybe I would not be satisfied if Shakespeare were covering the White House. Wonder if I could get Harry Hopkins elected. He might do the job. But imagine the look on Jim Farley's face if I told him; and Garner would have kittens. Some of my Harvard classmates would begin to stock up the old yacht with canned goods again. Let's see who was chosen as most likely to succeed in my class. Must get Missy to look that up.

"Alone at last?"

Wonder where all the fish are today? Probably gone Republican. Maybe Joe Kennedy and Bruce Barton would make the liveliest race of it. If Bruce could sell Barton the way he can sell cornflakes.

• • • •

I'd bet on Joe, though. Must not bet. Better write Elliott a note about not betting. Wouldn't do any good, though.

• • • •

That cruiser Houston certainly looks good over there. She's got a little scratch on her. Wonder if I'd have been any happier if I'd been an admiral? Maybe I should have sent Junior to Annapolis. Jimmy looks good in his Marine uniform. Don't know how Junior will like pouring over law books. He's getting good marks. It's a dog's life, though. Wonder if I am going to run for a third term. Gad, I thought I had a bite there. Eleanor seems to like it in Washington, when she's home. But I dassent mention it to her. She might put it in her column. I'm getting kinda used to the White House now. But there's no place like the old homestead. I'll bet Mount Vernon looked pretty good to George Washington after eight years. But he was all tired out, and I never felt better.

Maybe I can get by tomorrow without shaving. Skin was pretty tender this morning. I got to set a good example for these Navy officers of course, but maybe I could stay in my stateroom all day and read. Ought to read Jerome Frank's new book. Funny title, "Save America First." I thought I had it saved. How would it be if I landed at Pensacola with a three weeks' beard? Must not let my sense of humor run away with me.

• • • •

I wish I could remember how I felt when Teddy ran for a third term. Let's see, that was 26 years ago, and it seems only yesterday. Wish I'd kept a diary. I guess I've got more respect for the third term tradition than the stuffed shirts who wanted Coolidge to run again in '28.

• • • •

The sea is getting rough. Better put on some oilskins. Wouldn't a dash of mushroom soup taste good, though. Wonder how much salary John's going to get in his new job? That boy would have made a good columnist. He's got the gift of gab. I guess Jimmy can make a good living for the whole family, though. He's made more money at 30 than I've made all my life. How would it be if I turned the White House over to one of the boys I can count on, and ran for the Senate myself?

• • • •

But 1940 is still a long ways off. Better see if I've got any bait on my hook.

Policeman Shoots At Fleeing Gunman

Hospitals were warned to be on the lookout yesterday for a colored man who escaped early yesterday after trying to shoot a policeman.

Private George L. Norris, Eighth Precinct, fired three shots after the man as he was fleeing through a wooded section in the 5500 block of Wisconsin avenue northwest. Norris said he might have hit him.

Norris said he came upon the man apparently tampering with an automobile. He asked what he was doing and the man attempted to shoot. Norris stated the man threw the gun away when it failed to go off and ran.

Ruth, Sickly, Nervous Girl With Fine Voice, Among Children Post Fund Will Send to Camp

District boys in dozens of summer camps in nearby Maryland and Virginia are gaining the benefits of sunshine, fresh air and wholesome fun. This group of boys demonstrates with much enthusiasm what it means to a city lad to get in the country and into the water these hot and sultry days. In addition, they are eating as they can never eat in town, and country life provides the appetite.

This is the sixth of a series of articles outlining the needs of 100 underprivileged children whom local agencies have recommended for two weeks at camp and for whom The Post is raising a $1,400 camp fund. The seventh will appear tomorrow.

If 15-year-old Ruth were a millionaire's daughter, she probably would be studying music in an exclusive school and heading for success as a singer.

Instead, her father is a cripple who has been without work for 20 years. She and her seven brothers and sisters live on help from social agencies and on the little her mother makes from occasional odd jobs.

An unusually bright girl, with a lovely voice, Ruth is hampered by illness and crowded home conditions. Sickly and nervous, she is retarded in school. Her family is too devoted to consider a foster home for her. So Ruth becomes thinner and more excitable every day.

Two weeks of quiet living, far from her boisterous little brothers and sisters, would restore Ruth to health and happiness. Because social workers feel the girl has an artistic gift and qualities of leadership which should be developed they asked the help of the Council of Social Agencies in providing a vacation at camp for her.

Ruth will get her vacation, and so will 99 others whose need is as great, through The Washington Post camp fund. Contributions may be mailed to the camp fund editor or dropped in the counter box on the first floor of The Post Building. To date the fund totals $440.94, which assures 31 children a two-week camping experience.

A donation of $14 covers one child's tuition during the full 14-day term. Seven dollars will send him to camp for one week.

The Smith family, three more children for whom the camp fund was started, have acute financial troubles and soon may have more. Their father died last year. Since then their mother has worked two hours daily as a waitress, earning $3.90 a week. She will lose her job next month, when the restaurant replaces its waitresses with men.

Meanwhile, both she and her 7-year-old son and two younger daughters are in precarious health. For the children, two weeks of sunshine and good food are essential. For the mother, camp for them would mean a breathing spell during which she can rest from responsibility and hunt another job.

Ten-year-old Rudy and his sister, 6, also have first-hand information on the unemployment situation. Their father lost his job as a lithographer two years ago and has been unable to find work since. His unemployment compensation was discontinued last month, after the six-month maximum period was completed.

Now the family lives on the $12 the mother receives weekly as counter girl in a department store. The family is a happy one, despite their difficulties. Both children need the healthful diet and well-regulated life of camp.

Nina, 11, has been retarded in school because her family speaks only Italian. Her health is none too good because her mother lets her stay up at night as long as she likes. The arrival of a baby sister recently used up the family savings and will prevent Nina's father from paying tuition at a camp. Nina would benfit from companionship with other children and from the disciplined life of camp.

Nervous breakdown threatens 15-year-old Anna if she is not given a rest from an unhappy home situation. The second of seven sisters, among whom quarrels are frequent, she lives in a crowded flat with her parents. Both mother and father are ill, nervous and often impatient with their daughters. The noise and bickering have affected Anna's nerves and forced her to leave school. Transferred to the calm setting of a summer camp, she will acquire normal interests and learn to adjust to other people.

The Brown boys, 14 and 15, start out on paper routes at 4:30 a. m. During the school term, they scarcely have time to return home for breakfast before their classes. After school they deliver groceries. Their earnings would help them through camp this summer were it not for four brothers and sisters and a father who spends a large part of his $15 weekly salary on liquor. Both boys need a vacation to restore their vitality after a winter of hard work.

Law Guild Asks Bar Exams for Noncollege Men

The District Chapter of the National Lawyers' Guild, in a letter made public yesterday, asked Justice Peyton Gordon the rules for admission to the bar be adjusted so candidates without the requisite two years of college requirement be permitted to take comprehensive examinations to show their fitness.

The local guild secretary, Mrs. Florence de Haas Dembitz, emphasized regulations now proposed would set up a body of lawyers to decide the fitness of candidates.

Dorchester Tomatoes Ruined by Downpour

Cambridge, Md., July 24 (AP).—A pelting deluge early today, following an all-night downpour, took a heavy toll of the Dorchester County tomato crop as a climax to eight days of rainy weather.

21 Days in Grave Stunt Man's Goal

Buried alive in a specially constructed coffin, George Miller, 25, yesterday began what he expects to be not less than 21 days' interment. His record, he said, is 35 days.

Miller is a professional "buried-aliver" and subsists on milk while waiting out the days 6 feet underground. Unmarried, he says, "there's no room for a wife in this business."

Ohioan Named Coach For Staunton Schools

Staunton, Va., July 24.—Paul Halleck, of Dover, Ohio, has been elected physical director and coach in Staunton's public school system, succeeding Albert E. Halleck is a 1936 graduate of Ohio University. He was a member of the 1936 Olympic squad, hurling the discus and shot. He was on Ohio's varsity football squad for three years.

Mgr. O'Grady Backs Laymen In Social Work

Urges St. Vincent de Paul Society to Be Active in 'New Era.'

The volunteer social worker is coming into his own again, the Right Rev. Mgr. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, told members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society yesterday.

"In the new era a much larger part of the welfare work of the country will be done by Government, and the attitude of Government will be influenced more by large organizations of volunteers than by a few technicians," Mgr. O'Grady declared.

Twenty-eight parishes were represented at the meeting, which is held annually after the feast day of the patron saint, July 19. After a communion mass at St. Anthony's Church in Brookland, the 250 participants met for breakfast at Pilrim's Hall, Fourteenth and Quincy streets northeast.

In his talk, Mgr. O'Grady warned that "without active participation of groups like the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the new public welfare is liable to become hard and bureaucratic. It is liable even to become cruel in its treatment of the poor.

"It may sink to the level of the old poor laws that regarded the poor only as outcasts from society. Strong, active militant lay organization is our only guarantee against such extremities."

Speaking of the society's annual meeting to be held at Richmond in October, Mgr. O'Grady contrasted it with the historic convention held in the same city 30 years ago. Despite the greater complexity of this year's welfare work, "Richmond of 1908 ought to be an inspiration to members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society to heed the call to vigorous action against those problems which the Richmond meeting of 1938 presents," he said.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital with Elizabeth Thompson, 30, of 1903 N street northwest, a passenger in his car. Miss Thompson suffered lacerations and several broken teeth.

3 Injured in City.

Roma Farmer and his wife, Margaret Farmer, both colored, of Bryantown, Md., were brought to Providence Hospital early yesterday for treatment following an accident near Waldorf, Md.

Farmer, who was driving the machine, received a fractured skull and internal injuries. His wife escaped with minor cuts.

Anita Kennedy, 26, of 3110 Eighteenth street northwest, driver of one machine suffered a fractured right knee cap and Paul Mattox, 32, of 1804 M street northwest, operator of the car, and his wife Thelma, 37, also were hurt.

Mrs. Marie Eisinger, 40, of 4300 Brandywine street northwest, will face the jury in the death of Robert Williams.

Robert died instantly when he was run over near his home. He was coasting on a wheeled sleigh when it ran under the woman's automobile.

Charles Whiting, 37, of 701 Eighteenth street northeast, was in undetermined condition at Gallinger Hospital with a possible skull fracture after being found lying in the street at Nineteenth street and Benning road northeast. Police were investigating the possibility he was the victim of a hit-run driver.

May Rawls, 22, of 1101 New Jersey avenue southeast, was treated at Providence Hospital for a hip injury and released. Police said she was struck by an automobile at New Jersey avenue and L street southeast.

Mary Scott, 62, of 415 Sixth street southwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital last night for a fractured left leg and shock after she was struck by an automobile while crossing Seventh street near E street southwest. Her condition was undetermined.

Police said the automobile was driven by Robert E. Herring, 25, of 644 Independence avenue southwest.

Speakers Describe Recent Conference at Delaware Beach.

Delegates to the recent Young People's Conference at Bethany Beach, Del., 24 young people participated in a program depicting various phases of the conclave, which was attended by several hundred persons.

"I have never felt so close to God."

Betty and Dan Wray and Nellie May Jope also spoke. Conference songs were led by the Rev. Clifford H. Jope. Miss Mary Ruth Scott presided.

Minister Lays Nation's Ills To Selfishness

Rev. Mr. Moody Declares Laws Can't Cure Economic Evils.

"The way to solve the vexing social problems of this Nation today is not by further legal enactment, but by the elimination of the basic selfishness which underlies our national life," said the Rev. William R. Moody yesterday at St. Mark's Episcopal Church on Capitol Hill.

"Further legislation by the Congress to be elected this fall will not cure the social and economic ills of the Nation" he insisted, "for people will find a way around any law they do not wish to obey. It is not possible," he said, "to write a law so strict that clever men cannot find a way around it.

"The only way to make a law unbreakable," the Rev. Mr. Moody told the parishioners," is to train the hearts of the people so that they will not want to break it or get around it."

Saying that "the Christian gospel is not a code of laws but the 'good news' of God's willingness to save the world," he declared that "the gospel goes straight after the thing that is really wrong with the world—the cruel, selfish hearts of men and women."

In the mobilization of the men of knowledge, aspirations and socially significant ideals into a "united spiritual front" rests the future of humanity, Dr. Andrew Vance McCracken, of Concord, N. H., asserted yesterday morning from the pulpit of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Addressing a union service of the All Souls Unitarian, Universalist and Mount Pleasant congregations, the guest clergyman, in a plea for renewed confidence in the future, said that "there is much promise and assurance in the historical achievements of our Christian forefathers, and a backward glance gives us much chance for hope."

"There is also a hopeful sign," he pointed out, "in the advances being made in the fields of medicine, agriculture, industry and churchmanship, which contain the materials and vitality capable of lifting humanity to new levels of achievement."

Advising his hearers not to become too discouraged at the present world outlook, he declared that "in a world which out of such depths has traveled so far, Christians have the right to unfurl their bright banners of hope."

"God may be delayed in His plan by the selfishness, stupidity and stubborness of some men," stated Dr. McCracken, "but His purpose and Christ's kingdom on earth will never come to a tragic end."

Urging patience in awaiting "God's plan," he said that "we must remember that the Christian religion is a comparative newcomer in a long range of forces which have controlled this earth."

Chicago Woman Loses Purse With $316 in Taxi

Mrs. Mary O'Brien, of Chicago, visiting friends at 1620 Concord avenue northwest, reported to police she lost her pocketbook containing $16 cash and rings valued at $300 before she reached her destination.

She said she paid a cab driver in front of the Concord avenue address and left the cab. She missed her pocketbook after entering the house, she said, and believed she dropped it in the cab.

1 Shot Dead, 4 Slashed in U St. Melee

Riot Began as Officer Attempted to Arrest Victim as Drunk.

One man was slain and four others, including three special policemen, were badly slashed in a free-for-all battle in the 1600 block of U street northwest, early yesterday.

Hazel Frazier, colored, 34, 1923 Lee court northwest, died in Emergency Hospital a short time after the melee of a bullet wound in the heart.

Treated at Emergency and Freedmen's Hospital for knife cuts on their bodies and arms were Special Policemen James C. Butler, colored, 31, 422 Twenty-third place northeast; Rupert Crockett, colored, 24, 1209 T street northwest, and Robert Wood, 37, 611 Rhode Island avenue northwest. Dave Hill, colored, 30, 1901 R street northwest, a civilian, also was cut.

The battle started when Wood attempted to arrest Frazier for intoxication. They began to fight and the other special policemen came running up. Then more than a score of civilians entered the scrap.

Policemen from the Second and Thirteenth Precincts were called to quell the fracas which stopped only after Frazier fell to the street unconscious.

Investigation failed to disclose who shot the man. Police said the guns of the special policemen all contained at least one empty shell. The guns will be turned over to Detective Lieut. John H. Fowler for ballistics examination.

No inquest date was set while police still held in custody Wood, Butler and Crockett and three other men who witnessed the riot.

10 Cabin Outfits For Child Cripples Dedicated in Md.

Equipment in ten cabins at the camp for crippled children maintained at Thurmont, Md., by the Maryland League for Crippled Children was dedicated yesterday by the Maryland Department, American Legion, and its auxiliary. The equipment was donated by Maryland units of the Legion.

Short talks were made by Mrs. Ralph Sheffer of Hyattsville, chairman of the child welfare committee of the auxiliary, and the Rev. Raymond Cooke, of Baltimore, chairman of the Legion child welfare committee. Hope was expressed that two remaining cabins may be equipped soon.

Mrs. Sheffer said 7 of the 10 cabins were outfitted completely by seven organizations. These were the Maryland Department auxiliary, the Montgomery County Council of the Legion and its auxiliary, the Baltimore District auxiliary, the Snyder-Farmer Post and Auxiliary of Hyattsville, the Cissel-Saxon Post of Silver Spring, and the German H. H. Emory Post and Auxiliary of Baltimore.

The camp, built by the Works Progress Administration, was opened July 1 and now houses 96 children. More than 250 attended yesterday's ceremony.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Patient Plans Culminate Tonight In Dedication of Olney Theater

Out-of-Town Groups to Attend Opening, With Elissa Landi Starred in 'The Lady Has a Heart;' Films for Lepers; 'Family' Films Coming; Notes of the Theater.

THE event of outstanding importance of Washington's current theatrical week, of course, will be the dedication tonight of Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater, "the South's first professional summer theater, out Olney way in the heart of Maryland."

BELL.

The opening attraction, as everyone must know by now, will be Elissa Landi in the English adaptation of Ladislaus Bus-Fekete's Hungarian comedy of "The Lady Has a Heart," with Leslie Denison in the principal male role. The house, incidentally, is completely sold out for this inaugural occasion.

The opening ceremonies will begin as early as 6:30 p. m., when Miss Landi, as the first visiting star of the new rustic playhouse, will sign her name on the memorial oak which grows up through the lobby of the theater—or, perhaps it were better said, around which the lobby of the theater has been constructed by ingenious designing. One side of this venerable forest sentinel has been planed smooth to bear the autographs of the distinguished stars of the stage who will appear at the Olney and successively autograph the tree-trunk, from week to week. These signatures will be burned into the side of the tree for permanent preservation.

Judge Harold C. Smith, of Montgomery County, Md., will welcome Mr. Cochran and his players to the Olney countryside and "there will be no speeches," Impresario Cochran promises. All the speaking that is done at the Olney will be by the players from the stage seems to be the final edict.

The opening of the Olney tonight marks the culmination of plans that have been in course of formulation for the past several years in the face of obstacles that have been as multitudinous as some of them have seemed insuperable. In compliment to Mr. Cochran, Miss Landi and the achievement of a purpose that has refused to be deflected by discouragements, there will be delegations of well-wishers from New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore in tonight's audience, in addition to the outpouring from Washington. I trust the outpouring from Washington will not be attended by another downpouring from the heavens.

Contrary to an earlier threat of opposition, a fine community spirit seems to have sprung up over in Maryland with the Olney Theater as its nucleus. All of the outlying restaurants and golf clubs have proffered their fullest co-operation to make the new project a success. The Manor Club, the Indian Spring Club and the Columbia Country Club have offered to extend golf, swimming and tennis privileges to the visiting stars and supporting players appearing at the Olney, and Clara May Downey's Olney Inn, Brooke Johns' Old Barn, Frances Latties' Tea House, Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern, the Commonwealth Farms, the Pheasant Farms and Peter Fritz all have called upon the former manager of the National for full information and literature concerning the summer playhouse so that they may keep their guests informed as to visiting stars, attractions, prices, etc. In reciprocation, Mr. Cochran is advertising all of the "opposition" in his programs—including the Roadside Theater, the Cross Roads Theater and the Hilltop Theater, in Ellicott City, Md., which comprise Washington's "straw hat circuit."

Just one big, happy family!

From 400 South Glebe Road, Arlington, Va., under recent date, comes the following communication from a correspondent who signs his name in full, but prefers to have it withheld from print:

"Dear Mr. Bell: If the mention of Norma Shearer and Clark Gable for the star parts in 'Gone With the Wind' were feelers for public comment, let's go.

"With all due respect to Miss Shearer's great ability as an actress, it doesn't seem to me that anyone reading the novel would envision her as Scarlet O'Hara. As soon as I read that the story was to be filmed, it seemed to me that no one fitted the party, physically and temperamentally, quite as well as Patsy Kelly (believe it or not). It may be the craziest choice ever mentioned, but I believe Miss Kelly could and would rise above slapstick comedy and do the part justice.

"On the other hand, I think Clark Gable could 'do' Rhett Butler acceptably."

This column pleads guilty to having utilized the above letter as its inspiration for having included Miss Kelly in Sunday's casting of the role of Scarlett in the so-called theatrical "lead." Louise Fazenda, May Robson and Shirley Temple, however, were my own idea!

The world that goes daily to motion picture theaters finds it hard to realize that there are still populous places on the face of the earth where the talking picture is unknown. Among such spots are the far Pacific leper colonies of Culion, Cebu and Iloilo. Now, however, the Leonard Wood Memorial announces that, through Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., the heads of the industry have sent to thousands of unfortunate men, women and children in these isolated colonies a large shipment of sound films. Through the combined generosity of the industry, transfer companies and Pacific steamship lines, it has been made possible for this shipment of feature pictures and short subjects to reach its destination without cost to the Memorial or its ultimate beneficiaries. Culion, alone, is the abiding place of more than 7,000 Philippine lepers. Many of them never have seen a motion picture. To all of them, this shipment will be strictly "first run." The films were shipped on the S. S. Jeff Davis, July 20.

"So doth one shining deed, etc."

Bert Garmise, of the executive staff of Scribner's Magazine, sends me an advance copy of his next issue, due on the newsstands Wednesday, July 27, and in a cordial note suggests that "to figure out where a criminal is going to go and then get there ahead of him is crime-proofing. Gretta Palmer discusses this new police technique in her article, 'On Patrol With Crime-Proofers.'"

This new and engrossing story was the first I read in the Scribner book and it proved extremely interesting and informative—as it should also to such of the crooks at large as can read.

I trust Mr. Garmise and his associates will not be annoyed by the thought that in this topic lies a possible genesis for a series of short screen subjects that would possess all of the thrill of "police stuff" and still not give the crooks a shadow of a "break." It might even be employed as a novel sort of addendum to some such thing as the "Crime Does Not Pay" series, already so popular. As Miss Palmer describes these new preventive methods of certain State police departments, crime not only does not pay; in many instances it does not even get started. That, after all, is the fulfillment of the first function of "the law."

Although "Private Lives," by Noel Coward, will open for a week's engagement at the Cross Roads Theater tonight, "The Ghost Train," which closed Saturday, proved so successful that the Virginia hayloft players have gone to work immediately on another offering of the same general character. Thus, "The Ninth Guest," by Owen Davis, will follow "Private Lives," over at Baileys Cross Roads, instead of "Candle Light," as originally announced.

Washington soon will be privileged to contemplate a succession of more or less homely screen plays dedicated to the enjoyment of what, by a slight stretch, may be denominated the "family trade."

A likeness of Kay Francis and her interesting brood, in "My Bill," appears today on this page. At about the time "My Bill" opens at the Earle, "Mother Carey's Chickens" should be unfurling itself on the screen at R. K. O.-Keith's. A family-album portrait of Fay Bainter and her "chickens" will supplant Miss Francis and her youngsters at the top of this sheet in a day or two. And running neck-and-neck, as the saying goes, with these two will be the latest celluloid recital of events in the Judge Hardy household, relating in what manner "Love Finds Andy Hardy."

All three of these picture-plays come to town heavily laden with the encomiums of other discriminating cities. If the adroit casting of their principal roles has anything to do with it, none may discreetly be omitted from any judicious theatergoer's "must" list.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 24.—What a rip-snorting, exciting time I had Sunday. You don't often read about parties like these—it might do harm to the industry.

HEDDA HOPPER

After which we played a game. I was asked to join in. I hate games and said, "No, I'll watch." The watching took all of a second, when I was in deeper than the other. Silliest thing you ever heard of. You're given a title, quotation, name—anything, which you draw, the members of your table guessing. Sorry to admit it, but Jeanette and Nelson won at ours.

"Having Wonderful Time"—done in a few strokes . . . man's head, wearing a broad grin, and the face of a watch. We got Sally Rand out of a tiny fan. Four strokes did it. Five o'clock came around before you could say, "I'm a dunce."

Girls, when you can find a man to design a room like that, don't walk, race him to the altar!

Then on to Edgar Bergen's hilltop home where he entertained the coffee crew. Some already dunking their bodies in the pool. He has a nine-hole putting green and the finest view here about. You can really see Catalina Island. The house was built by a woman 70 years young who flies her own plane.

John Myers, Edgar's lawyer, entertained us with a few flying stunts, too. For a minute I thought he'd take the chimney with him. Later, he joined us for supper, in the patio. 'Hamburgers and hot dogs, cooked there on a huge round outdoor grill. We had trimmings, too—fried chicken, biscuits, baked beans, three kinds of salad, fresh raspberry pie and that dated coffee. Oh, shucks—I've given in. I'll grow hip, hips and be happy.

After that hor d'oeuvre, Nelson Eddy arrived and joined John Carter and Eddie Arnold while they sang "Asleep in the Deep," which ended when they were given the bird.

Then in the patio out under the stars we saw one of the most fascinating moving pictures ever put together. Aviation from its inception. Every kind of balloon, bag, crate, cake box, that's ever left the ground—some didn't. The picture belongs to Mr. Klinker, who has 200,000 feet of it. We saw 5,000 of 'em, starting back in 1900. The first attempt and then the flight across the English Channel. We saw Teddy Roosevelt easing and pushing his 200 pounds into a thing made of tiny wire and what looked like a couple of match boxes. But he with the pilot took off and glided into the air. That was in 1910. It took plenty of what Teddy had lots of—courage.

We saw the rugged, weather-beaten faces of our pioneers, risking their lives to bring aviation to its present state of perfection. There was Cal Coolidge pinning a medal on Lindbergh. Amelia Earhart's words as she landed in England. President Roosevelt congratulating Wiley Post. Takeoff and last words of Will Rogers. And, now Howard Hughes.

I asked Mr. Klinker why he didn't show publicly. He replied, "You can't commercialize your hobby."

Dance Floors For Romance, Says Maestro

Correspondent Sidetracked From Picture Stars by Noted Conductor.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, July 24 (U.P.).—When you're dancing in a doggy night club with the boy friend and mooning about things romantic, do you ever think about what the band leader's thinking about behind that smile?

Reisman is the man who advertises cigarettes on the radio. He doesn't smoke. He also has a beer program. He doesn't drink. All he does is play sweet music, and think about the customers.

"A night club," he said, "is doing a public service for a community. It gives men and women a chance to dance and thus helps them decide whether they want to get married. That's all dancing is good for. I'm convinced of it.

Some Like It.

"Of course there are a few people who dance because they like the rhythm, but mostly they're more interested in learning about their partners than about new steps. So the dancing room provides them a cozy place with dim lights and pleasant music to stimulate them—and it consequently helps to preserve the race.

"People are like animals in lots of ways. For instance, I have noted that in the winter, when its cold, folks like to go into the ground, like bears. That's why the cellar night clubs do the most business in the winter time.

"In the sumer time the customers are still like animals. They like to climb up high. A cabaret underground doesn't do so well in the summer time, but business in the roof gardens booms."

Reisman said he seldom plays swing music because it brings out the athletic urge in the customers—and he believes the gymnasium was no place for romance.

As for night clubs themselves, he has played in the best of them throughout the nation, and he still hasn't found one ideally suited for the promotion of romance.

Romance Needs Privacy.

"If I were building the ideal night club," he said, "I would have a circular dance floor. That's so the dancers would have a feeling of privacy, which they need and seldom get.

"The room itself would be square, so they wouldn't have to stumble past long rows of tables to get to the floor.

"The walls wouldn't be blue or red, or even buff. They would be white. That's because the dancers are decoration enough in themselves. Furthermore, a woman always looks her best against a white background and that's important—having the women looking their best."

Our original intention in talking to Reisman was to get a yarn about which movie stars are the best dancers, which actors step on the most toes, which actresses are the clumsiest, and so on. We figured that would make a good movie story.

Boy, would it!

Reisman has been here only a few days, but he's already got a lot of his customers spotted. He named 'em all by name, told which elderly producer likes to dance with blondes and whatnot, at length, but he said he hoped we would keep such information secret.

Autumn Films Of Paramount Are Announced

Fourteen feature pictures will be completed and ready for release by Paramount during September, October and November, the first quarter of the 1938-1939 season, it was announced last week by Neil F. Agnew, vice president of Paramount in charge of sales and distribution.

The release schedule represents an interesting and varied program of screen entertainment, with many of the most popular players in Hollywood in stellar and featured roles.

First scheduled for release in September is the Bing Crosby-Fred MacMurray film, "Sing You Sinners," produced and directed by Wesley Ruggles, to be followed by "Return of the Fox," starring Bill Boyd, and "Sons of the Legion," which will have Billy Cook, Donald O'Connor and Billy Lee, under the direction of James Hogan.

"Arkansas Traveler," with Bob Burns in the stellar role, under the direction of Alfred Santell, and "Campus Confessions," directed by George Archainbaud, complete the September release schedule. The college picture will have a cast headed by Hank Luisetti, Stanford basketball star; Betty Gable, Eleanore Whitney and Robert Cummings.

The October schedule contains two of the most pretentious productions to be filmed in Hollywood this year, "If I Were King," produced and directed by Frank Lloyd, with Ronald Colman in the starring role, and "Men With Wings," the Technicolor cavalcade of aviation, produced and directed by William Wellman, featuring a cast headed by Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell and Andy Devine.

The October release list also includes "Touchdown Army," with Mary Carlisle and John Howard; "King of Alcatraz," with Lloyd Nolan and J. Carrol Naish, and "Mysterious Rider," a Zane Grey story.

In November Paramount will release the Jack Benny-Joan Bennett picture, "Artists and Models Abroad," which is being directed by Mitchell Leisen; "St. Louis Blues," with George Raft and Dorothy Lamour, directed by Raoul Walsh; "Escape From Yesterday," with Frances Farmer, Leif Erikson and Akim Tamiroff, and "Soubrette," with Ray Milland and Olympe Bradna co-starred under the direction of Andrew Stone.

Priscilla Puts Boy Friend on 'Spot'

Pricilla Lane's new and hitherto unknown boy friend, Oren Haglund, has had to explain himself for the first time in his life as a result of the new romance.

The Haglund facts of life include ownership of an $18,000 automobile paid for from the proceeds of scenario sales, of which there have been 12 in the past six years. He is 32 and nearly bald. His occupations at various times have been office and messenger boy, carpenter, electrician, script clerk, microphone boom boy, sound mixer, property man, set dresser and now second assistant director.

Glen Echo Park

The crowds who danced to the tunes of Herbie Holmes in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo over the week-end are an index of the popularity of this "band from the old Yazoo," which began a second week's engagement last night. Nancy Hutson, Billy Reeves and the Three Rhythm Rebels contributed much to the gayety of the ballroom and will probably continue to do so.

A week-end "must" on the visiting list of hundreds was the Crystal Pool, which did the proverbial "land office business." Another attraction that pulled them in was the "World Cruise," the big "boat" by means of which visitors are taken to all parts of the world in the cool cavernous depths of the "liner."

Plenty of people had plenty of fun on those new dodgem rides, all equipped with the latest type of car. Boat lovers flocked to the waterway canal, where an entire fleet of swift motor launches were available.

About 90 per cent of the visitors take in everything, and that includes the snappy coaster dips, the whirring airplane swings, the funny midway and numerous small amusements. Picnic parties throughout the park were numerous, as usual.

Trans-Lux

A new era in newsreel service is inaugurated in the current Trans-Lux show. Douglas Corrigan arrived in Ireland Monday, after a 28-hour span of the Atlantic, and the movies of the landing of his plane and events immediately following were on the screen of the Trans-Lux Friday morning.

Also, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth arrived in Paris Tuesday, and the magnificent panorama of that momentous event likewise is shown, thanks to the successful transatlantic flight of England's "piggy-back" auxiliary plane.

Time marches on, for a fact, and the latest issue of the journalistic movie of similiar name, also in the program, is a vividly dramatic and informing depiction of that colorful branch of Government service, th U. S. Coast Guard. Other highlights of the newsreel digest are ace newsmen getting awards for distinguished service, the withdrawal of German military advisers to China, the premiere of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and Paul Runyon demonstrating rare golf form in slow motion.

The travelog is a FitzPatrick, in color, and the subject is New Brunswick; the cartoon a Disney, "Three Little Wolves," very funny and the best ever.

Can-Can.

The famous "Can-Can," Parisian night life's "Big Apple" in the first decade of this century, will be brought out of the past in a cabaret scene of Paramount's forthcoming Al Lewin production, "Zaza," starring Claudette Colbert opposite Herbert Marshall.

Little

Vivid and irresistible action again takes command of the screen at the Little Theater this week, where the feature of the bill is a revival of the Warner Brothers' stirring production of "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

In this mammoth and spectacular screen play considerable liberty is taken with historical fact, but the net result is entertainment that is as romantic as it is exciting. Love, political intrigue and military treachery are made the motivating considerations in building action to a climax that realistically culminates in the famous horse charge at Balaklava, immortalized in history and literature.

The events that lead to this overpowering segment of the film have their inception in India, where British army officers vie for the favor of Elsa Campbell. They move then to the Crimean War and terminate, as already said, in the thundering charge of the heroic cavalrymen, acting under forged orders.

The bill, of course, is augmented by shorter screen subjects and a new release of the picturized news events.

Hospitalized.

Thrice Napoleon.

Sergei Arabelof has appeared as Napoleon three times in one year. He is currently enacting the Little Corporal in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Bravest of the Brave."

AMUSEMENTS

Galento Given Two Blood Transfusions, Nears Crisis

This Morning

Espey, the Sleuth.

John Kingsbury Espey, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment for the Washington Redskins, yesterday emerged from his file case with a three-day growth of beard and the profound discovery that: "'Tain't so!"

POVICH.

Gibbering wildly as he flourished a sheaf of important looking facts and figures, Espey added: "It is a foul canard, and I have the evidence!"

Pray, what was Mr. Espey talking about, we asked?

"I am talking about the Redskins, of course," said Mr. Espey. I never talk about anything but the Redskins on Mr. George Marshall's time."

Specifically, in what connection was Mr. Espey talking about the Redskins?

"I am here today to nail a lie. I am here to deny that the Redskins are a doddering, old collection of college stars and middle-aged thugs!" said Espey.

Who said they were?

"Nobody, in particular, but you know what the impression is. I was driven to my research by the reports that there is a vast difference in age between pro football players and college men. That impression has been due to loosely-applied adjectives and other descriptives in the newspapers which have tended to picture pro players as grizzled veterans, hardened old hands and matured men whose youth is far behind them. 'Tain't so."

Staggering beneath the stack of documents he had carried from the file rooms, Espey cited the following facts:

Just Plain Kids.

Two of Coach Ray Flaherty's prize rookies—George Karamatic, the Gonzaga U. flash, and Wee Willie Wilkin, 245 pounds of tackle from St. Mary's—have just reached the voting age. And Karamatic, with Andy Farkas and Jim Abith, a pair of 22-year-olds, is the prime choice to succeed 30-year-old Cliff Battles as the Redskins' fullback.

Of the squad of 45, exactly 28 of the Redskins are comparatively beardless youths of 24 years, or younger. The dean of the team is 31-year-old Turk Edwards, tackle and captain, Espey pointed out.

"And we're giving the detractors a little the best of it there, too," said Press Agent Espey. "Because Edwards, while we are listing him as 31 years old, actually will not be 31 until the day after the season opens."

Feller's Arm Dead?

Bobby Feller's frank admission to Boston interviewers that he had lost the zip on his fast ball is a bit startling. Feller should know, but you can't prove it by the Nats.

The 19-year-old Iowan pitched in Griffith Stadium 12 days ago and he struck out eight Nats. And he wasn't striking them out with his curve ball. If he has lost his speed it has been within the past fortnight.

Manager Oscar Vitt lent a bit of credence to Feller's strange story by adding frankly that he "was disappointed" with the pitching of young Bob.

The chances are that every other manager in the league would like to have a staff comprised entirely of "disappointments" such as Feller, who has won 10 games and lost 5. With a staff like that, a club would win more than 100 of its 154 games and, this season particularly, that kind of an average would bring the pennant without much of a struggle.

Many of Feller's victories have not been of the sensational type. The Indians have usually been getting plenty of runs for him and he has won games by inflated scores. But we are always reminded of Ty Cobb's crack about pitchers who win with plenty of runs scored for them.

"Get me those kind," Cobb used to say to his scouts. "Don't bring me any of those pitchers who are always getting beat 2-1, and 3-2. I'd rather have a lucky pitcher any day than those fellows who pitch low-scoring games and lose. You can't win pennants with those kind."

No Surprise.

If Feller, has, indeed, lost his speed as he says, it could not be entirely surprising at that. His critics always did aver that Feller threw with an arduous motion that placed a terrific strain on his arm in contrast, for example, to the rythmic delivery of Walter Johnson whose pitching motion was more of a sweep with his leg and back muscles brought heavily into play.

Johnson, unlike Feller, was never troubled by a sore arm in his early career. He pitched for 13 years before he felt even a twinge of pain in the throwing arm. Feller, however, came up with a sore arm in his second season in the big leagues.

Cleveland officials blamed it on his overwork in the spring exhibition series against the Giants in 1937 when Feller was used as an attraction to lure the local yokels to the games. He was out of the line-up for two months with his fatigued flipper. That sore arm in 1937 may have left its mark. A 19-year-old youth doesn't ordinarily lose the zip on his fast one.

Reid Rates an 8-5 Favorite Over Lee in Griffith Stadium Battle

System of Scoring by Lights Will Be Tried in Fight Tonight; Al Mancine Also on Card.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The bell rings on another featherweight feud tonight at Griffith Stadium where Al Reid, clever little New Yorker squares off with Paul Lee in the eight-round feature of Marse Joe Turner's weekly exhibition of the manly art of self defense. It will be over the eight-round route.

Along the rialto Reid is reckoned an 8-5 favorite to win over the reformed mountaineer, but there is an abundance of sympathetic Lee dollars in circulation which may pull down the price considerably before the boys climb into the arena.

This bout will mark the trial of a mazda system of keeping the fans informed of the bout's progress. After each round a bulb will gleam in the corner of the gladiator ahead on points, and if fans and officials find the idea satisfactory it will be continued permanently—if unsatisfactory it will be dropped pronto.

This will be Reid's first appearance here since he handed Tony Dupre a boxing lesson at the Arena last January and he expects to make a triumphant reentry into town. Since then he has boxed and beaten Vincent Dell Orto, Johnny DeFoe and one or two others of similar caliber, in addition to waging three torrid fights with Mike Belloise.

Belloise was awarded the decision in their last engagement after getting draws in the first two. Reid is rated one of the two outstanding contenders for Henry Armstrong's featherweight crown, elimination tournaments to the contrary notwithstanding around New York, and figures to get a shot at the

Strong Heart Helps Boxer, Doctors Say

Orange, N. J., July 24 (U.P.).—The condition of Tony Galento, heavyweight fighter stricken with pneumonia, remained serious, doctors said tonight, after giving two blood transfusions to stimulate resistance.

He will reach the crisis tomorrow forenoon, they said.

After the second transfusion, his physicians reported Tony's temperature at 104.2, pulse 92 and respiration, 32; virtually the same as last night. He remained in an oxygen tent and has been allowed no visitors except Manager Joe Jacobs.

The semibald Italian still had pep enough to object to the doctors "punchin' holes in me arm."

Lewis Visits Tony.

John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight champion, whom Tony was scheduled to fight at Philadelphia Tuesday, arrived from Atlantic City tonight and visited Galento. He shook hands with Tony through the tent flap and said; "I'm awfully sorry Tony. I hope you get well soon."

Lewis sent a candle to St. Venatius Catholic Church in Orange and it was burned for Tony's recovery today, while masses were said for Galento in all Catholic churches in the Orange area. Crowds lingered about the hospital inquiring about the fighter's progress, and his wife, Mary, brought a bowl of soup to the hospital.

A consultation of physicians decided upon the transfusions shortly after noon. They were considered necessary because Tony's temperature ranged, during the night, from 103.4 to 105.6, with pulse 92 and respiration 32. The physicians in consultation were Drs. Joseph E. Higi, Orange; Norman Plummer, of New York, and Dean Marquis and W. H. A. Warner, of East Orange.

Gets "Pep Talk."

Despite Galento's high fever and heavy breathing, the physicians reported that his heart remained strong. At the request of the physicians, Tony's manager, Joe Jacobs, went into the fighter's room after the first transfusion and gave him a "pep talk."

Jacobs said he gave him such a fighting talk that when he finished, Tony was shouting under the oxygen tent, "I'll lick it!"

Galento became ill Thursday night after a strenuous workout at Madame Bey's training camp, Summit, N. J. He drove from the camp to his Orange home with the wind blowing in upon him through the car windows. He remained in bed Friday and was taken to the hospital Friday night.

Yanks Split WithChisox; Gomez Wins

New York, July 24. (AP).—The Yankees, getting a "break" from the weather man for the first time since last Tuesday, split even with the Chicago White Sox in a doubleheader today to maintain their one-game lead on the American League pennant race.

They made the most of two hits off Thornton Lee and three enemy errors to take the opener, 2 to 0, behind Lefty Gomez's six-hit flinging. Red Ruffing's shoulder suddenly tightened in the nightcap after he had tossed six shutout innings, and he had to retire. The Sox climbed aboard his relief, Johnny Murphy and Steve Sundra, for eight runs in the eighth inning and took the ball game, 8 to 3.

Lee was the victim of loose fielding in the opener, with the Yanks scoring both their runs in the second frame. Boze Berger dropped Joe DiMaggio's fly, and the Yankee flychaser reached second. He scored a moment later, when Lee threw past third on Lou Gehrig's tap to the box. Bill Dickey then doubled Gehrig across with the final run.

In the nightcap, Red Rolfe's homer in the fourth sent the Yanks away in front, and they scored again in the fifth for a 2-to-0 edge. The Sox batted around, however, in their big eighth inning to give Monte Stratton his ninth win of the year against four setbacks.

Cubs Take 15-Inning Battle From Giants

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—Stan Hack's fifth hit of the game, a clean double to left that scored Billy Jurges from second, gave the Chicago Cubs a 15-inning 5-to-4 victory over the New York Giants today, and swept the three-game series with the defending champions.

Hack previously had scored the tying run in the ninth on Carl Reynolds' single off Carl Hubbell, who entered the game in the seventh as the third Giant pitcher, succeeding Bill Lohrman and Harry Gumbert.

Lee, who allowed only four hits and no runs in his six innings after succeeding Larry French and Clay Bryant, earned his thirteenth victory and his second in two days over the Giants.

The game ended the Giants' disastrous Western invasion with 9 defeats as against 4 victories and gave the Cubs a home stand of 11 victories and 2 defeats against the East. They are now 1½ games behind the second-place Giants.

Babe Ruth Hits A Homer, Wins $50

St. Louis, July 24 (AP).—Babe Ruth showed St. Louis he can still hit the old apple by driving out a 430-foot home run to win $50 in a long-distance slugging contest before today's Dodger-Cards doubleheader.

With Mervin Shea, Brooklyn catcher, on the mound (each contestant picked his own pitcher) the Babe grinned, nodded toward rightfield and took a healthy swing. The ball carried out over the right pavilion and landed in the Grand avenue street-car tracks.

Magic Work By Leonard Nets Victory

By Shirley Povich.

Late yesterday afternoon the Nats discovered a pitcher who could stop the St. Louis Browns. Before 15,000 customers who had sat disconsolately through the first game of a double header as the Nats took a 4—2 beating from Oral Hildebrand, big Dutch Leonard squared accounts for the Washington folks by winning the second game, 11 to 1.

Leonard and his knuckle ball were an annoying pair to the Browns who were threatening a clean sweep of the three-game series. He yielded three hits and a run in the first inning and then reformed magically. In the last eight innings he pitched scoreless, four-hit ball. In fact, it wasn't until two were out in the ninth that the Browns were able to advance a runner as far as third base.

The Nats' batting attack underwent a complete transformation between games. Held to eight hits in the opener by lanky Hildebrand, the Washington athletes stirred up 12 hits against Russ Van Atta and Ed Cole in the finale, with both Al Simmons and Zeke Bonura emerging from their slumps. Simmons pounded out three hits and Bonura two.

Browns Make 4 Errors.

For the Browns, the second game was a complete fiasco. Runless after the first inning, they tossed four damaging errors into the proceedings to give the Nats a cluster of unearned runs.

That first game was a bitter dose for young Ken Chase, who lasted only three innings against the Browns. With the St. Louis club in possession of a 2-0 lead, Bucky Harris deemed the need of a pinch hitter more imperative than Chase's presence on the mound, and he was waved out. Jimmy DeShong yielded the Browns their last two runs while working the last six innings.

George McQuinn, the Clarendon, Va., boy, who grew up under the nose of Clark Griffith, was the chief offender against the pitching of Chase and DeShong in that first game. In five times at bat, he walked once and swatted four hits, including an over-the-wall homer. He drove in two runs and scored two himself. Aside from that he was practically no value to the Browns.

It wasn't until the fifth inning that the Nats could score against Hildebrand. Then singles by Travis, Rick Ferrell and George Case produced a lone run. But by that time the Browns had two.

Three Runs in Third.

Chase escaped in the first inning when, after Mel Almada and McQuinn had opened the game with singles, the Browns were nipped attempting a double steal. And he held them scoreless in the second only because McQuillan was caught at home on an attempt to score from third on an infield grounder to Wasdell.

But in the third former Ex-Nat Almada launched the inning with a double against the rightfield wall, and McQuinn, Clift and Kress socked identical singles to centerfield to drive two runs across the plate.

In the third, the Browns improved their lead to 3-1 very simply. George McQuinn just hit one of DeShong's pitches over the rightfield wall. In the eighth they made it 4-1 against DeShong when Don Heffner doubled down the leftfield line.

McQuinn's muff of Sammy West's grounder in the eighth was followed by Wright's double to right and the Nats appeared in a mood to tie the score. But they collected only a single run when Hildebrand disposed of Myer and Travis on outfield flies. In the ninth, Pinch Hitter Al Simmons singled with two out, but it was unimportant.

In the second game, the Browns again started flashily with Almada and McQuinn duplicating their first-game efforts by leading off with singles. Bell then singled to center and the Browns had a 1-0 lead.

Nats Given Three Runs.

But the rest of the game took on a distinctly Washington hue, what with Leonard pitching shut-out ball after the first inning. In the second inning, the Nats benefitted from three tainted runs, scored five all told and wiped out the Browns' 1-0 lead with a flourish.

They did it all with two out. Leonard singled to center and a single by Case and a walk to Lewis filled the bases. Sammy West sliced a single to left and two runs scored. Van Atta walked Simmons to fill the bases again and then Zeke Bonura was the recipient of a gift double and the Nats three gift runs.

Young Glenn McQuillan, slightly misjudging Bonura's long fly to leftfield, finally started in the proper direction and then lost his footing on the slippery turf. Bonura's ball fell safely and three Nats scored.

The Browns put two of their four errors together in the third inning and the Nats scored a run without benefit of a hit. In the seventh, against Ed Cole, Cecil Travis followed singles by Simmons and Bonura with a double to center and the Nats' lead was 8-1.

In the eighth, Cole had a horrible time of it. He pitched a double to Case and then saw Heffner muff Lewis' grounder. Then he pitched a single to Simmons and then he hit Bonura in the back. To top it off, he pitched a single to Travis and then he hit Bluege in the back, forcing in a run. The upshot of it all was three more runs for Mr. Griffith's lads.

Snead Beats Guldahl By Stroke at Chicago

Finishes With 207 to Win Chicago Open; Guldahl Finishes Well, But Is Shot Behind; Dick Metz Third.

Chicago, July 24.—"Slammin' Sam" Snead felt "the pressure" from golf's greatest stretch finisher today and barely withstood it to capture the $5,000 Chicago Open championship at Olympia Fields.

The young star from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., took down first prize money of $1,500 but big Ralph Guldahl gave him an anxious half hour. The two-time National Open champion raked the last 18 holes for a blistering two-under par 68—with a birdie on the last green—and a 54-hole total which fell just a stroke short of a tie for top honors.

Snead, the season's leading money winner at $8,612 with today's addition to his bank account, scored a brilliant par 70 on the last 18 holes over the hazard-strewn No. 4 course.

Out in 36, one over par, he came home in 34, one under regulation figures. He wilted on the final two holes, however, going over par on each of them as Guldahl came through with another of his stretch "runs," amazing even though it fell a stroke short of a tie.

At the end of 36 holes Snead had a 137 total to 140 for Guldahl, who had a 72 yesterday and this morning scored a 68. Snead added a three over par 73 this morning to his sensational first-round 64.

On the final 18, Guldahl went out in 34, one under par, to pick up two strokes on Snead as the latter carded his 36. Snead "bore down" to get birdies at the fourteenth and sixteenth greens but slipped over par on the final two holes. Guldahl, meanwhile, played par golf through the sixteenth, got another par on the seventeenth after missing by inches a putt which would have given him a birdie, and then clipped a stroke off par on the final green.

Second money amounted to $750. Third money of $400 went to handsome Dick Metz, of Chicago, who had a 54-hole total of 212. Lloyd Mangrum, Los Angeles, and Ed Dudley, Philadelphia, with 214 totals, split the $550 fourth and fifth place prize. In the 216 bracket were Leonard Dodson, Springfield, Mo.; Harry Cooper, Chicopee Falls, Mass.; Willie Goggin, of San Bruno, Calif.,

Joe Burk Wins Sculling Victory

Red Bank, N. J., July 24 (AP).—Joe Burk, New Jersey farm boy who holds the world's premier sculling laurels, retained his United States singles crown without opposition today at the sixty-sixth national rowing championships while team honors went to the defending titleholder, Buffalo's West Side Rowing Club.

Burk paddled the North Shrewsbury mile-and-quarter course alone due to the withdrawal of his only eligible challenger, James Russell, of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Toronto. West Side's well-balanced aggregation overcame a strong field successfully to defend the Julius H. Barnes trophy.

According to Coach Bill Reinhart, who should know, the young man to watch this fall in a G. W. football uniform is Fred Sartori, a prospective soph flash from Sacramento, Calif. . . . Max Carey, one of the Brooklyn Dodgers' former managers, golfed at Congressional Country Club yesterday. Carey currently holds down a vice president' berth with the Persian Limes Co. in Florida . . . Also included on the squad is Malcolm Weinstein, nineteenth ranking national junior player . . . All of which suggests that the locals will have their hands full next Tuesday.

The West Virginia-Pitt game, strange as it sounds, may develop into one of the prize contests of the grid season . . . Although the N. B. The lowly St. Louis Browns appear to have found at haven in Griffith Stadium of late, having won three out of their last four games here . . . Heavyweight Tourney Planned by Jacobs

New York, July 24 (U.P.).—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today that he will stage a big "catch-all" heavyweight tournament at Madison Square Garden from October to April to find the best possible June challenger.

He said, "The winner will fight Joe Louis or whoever happens to be champion in June."

"Yes, Joe wants to fight in September," the promoter explained. "I expect to arrange a September title match for him this week. Maxie Baer probably will be the opponent, although I'm not sure of that yet. I expect Joe's managers, Julian Black and John Roxborough, to come to New York for a conference. Then I will contact Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman, by telephone in California."

D. C. Tennis Aces Retain Their Titles

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 24.—Barney Welsh, of Rockville, Md., turned loose some of the most spectacular tennis of his career today to defend successfully his West Virginia open tennis title against George Judson, of Phoenix, Ariz., 6—1, 6—2, 6—1.

Just before the men's finals, the crowded galleries saw Mrs. Stanley K. Robinson, of Washington, the former Margaret Carspecken, of Morgantown, turn back the defending champion, Edith Clarke, of Washington, in a bitterly contested match, 8—6, 3—6, 6—4.

Welsh showed a brand of tennis completely superior to Judson, who seemed weak and independable in the clinches.

Welsh Too Good.

Welsh pressed through on first service to take the first three games of the opening set. Judson braced and took the fourth game, but tried vainly to rally as Welsh ran the set out, 6—1.

Judson picked up two games in the second through good play, but could not hold the touch, and bad luck again followed his good court coverage as Welsh took the set, 6—2. It was much the same in the final set, which the Marylander took, 6—1.

Mrs. Robinson Tops.

In the women's finals Mrs. Robinson pulled the first set out of the fire 8-6 after close, hard play but dropped the second 3-6 when Miss Clarke used forcing shots to good advantage.

Mrs. Robinson caught the titleholder unaware several times with beautifully executed drop shots. Most of the games in the final set went to deuce except the nineteenth, which Mrs. Robinson won at love on her own service.

Eddie Blickle, of Huntington, and Robert Shanklin, of Aashland, Ky., won the men's doubles title in straight sets over young Deacon Parsons, of Huntington, and Marion Shane, of Kalamazoo, Mich., 6—1, 6—1, 6—4, in a not too interesting match.

The youngsters played weakly against the veterans Blickle and Shanklin in the first two sets but braced a little in the third.

The women's doubles title went to Miss Clarke and Mrs. Robinson, who defeated Suzanne Morton, of Louisville, Ky., and Sara Moore, of Charleston, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2.

Fights

title within the next few months if Armstrong elects to defend it. Belloise is conceded the No. 1 position on the challenger's list.

Reid is the stand-up-and-box type of ringman who rarely fails to please the crowd. He has a left jab that whips out like a spring coil and a right that carries a terrific hangover with it. It's hardly possible that Reid will flatten Lee, or even floor him, but he may cut him up considerably.

Lee, who made a successful debut against Armando Sicilia here two weeks ago, is the barroom type of brawler who bars no holds, asks no quarter and takes two to get one in. Sicilia ripped a jagged patch of flesh out of his forehead in their spectacular scrap, but the wound only served to speed up Lee's attack and the former Tennessee farm boy finished like a madman.

Mancine on Card.

Lee's strategy will consist of getting inside Reid's long, sharp left and drilling him in the midsection with both hands. If Reid is not accustomed to milling and mixing like a back-woodsman he's be at a distinct disadvantage at close quarters, for Lee is a veritable tiger. If, on the other hand, Reid succeeds in keeping his opponent at arm's length and sticks him often enough with the left, Lee will have a difficult time keeping the lamp lighted in his corner.

A well-balanced supporting card has been arranged with Al Mancine, of Providence, battling Augie Kroll, of Baltimore, in another eight-round bout. The pair will manufacture the semifinal and, unless Mancine has gone way back in the last month or so, the fans are going to see a top-flight featherweight in action. Kroll, however, has enough on the ball to make a fight of it.

Armando Sicilia and George Carlo are scheduled to box six rounds; Angelo Puglisi and Rusty Baker, six, and Billy Banks vs. Pee Wee Lewis, four. The latter will open the show.

Tigers Take Double Bill From Macks

Philadelphia, July 24 (AP).—Detroit ended a seven-game losing streak today by taking a double-header from the Athletics, 7-to-6 and 7-to-3.

A six-run rally in the fifth inning, climaxed by Greenberg's twenty-ninth homer with the bases full, won the first game, the A's nearly came from behind in the ninth, but with the bases full and two out, Frank Hayes hit a three and two pitch to Fox for the last out. Auker got credit for the win, although forced to leave in the fifth when hit on the hand by a line-drive.

Tommy Bridges yielded only six hits in the second game, one of them a homer by Bill Werber. Sam Chapman also hit a round-tripper for the A's in the first game.

Diffenbaugh's 74 Wins Third Money

Peacock and Brownell Lose as Giants Beat Midgets at Indian Spring; Capital Two-Ball Title to Aten and Miller; Golf News.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

After losing four strokes to Al Houghton on the first three holes, Wiffy Cox, Congressional mentor, played the final 16 holes at East Potomac in two under par to tie the Old Point Comfort pro's 73 in the pro sweepstakes event yesterday over the lake-dotted course. Fourteen professionals competed in the event before some 1,200 fans.

Third, a shot behind the leaders and 2 over par, was George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, with 36-38—74, while three were deadlocked at 75, a stroke out of the prize money; Bill Carson, Anacostia; Frank Cunningham, Burning Tree, and Danny Burton, Army and Navy.

Playing the toughened B and D courses, scene of the public links championship next Wednesday and Thursday, the pros were unable to match the strengthened par figures of 72. Low scoring was virtually impossible, however, as the course was water-soaked from recent rains and the greens were long, being too soft to cut.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, and Gene Larkin, Woodmont, were next with 77's, while Mel Shorey, East Potomac; Al Price, Rock Creek, and Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase, were other 80 breakers. Shorey, who has scored consistently low over the course all season, disappointed with his score, as did Leo Walper, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, who had the highest round of the day, an 83.

Houghton and Shorey, playing as partners against Cox and Walper, finished all even before the biggest gallery of the day. Houghton was out in 35, one under par, while Cox after a 4-5-6 start, was 37, one over. He was playing in a tattered shirt, tearing one sleeve out after it interferred with his swing.

Wiffy picked up two shots on Houghton on the twelfth hole, with a birdie to a bogey six, and knocked in a birdie on the final green to tie Houghton's 73. The latter had eight 4's and the six on 12 on the back nine. Diffenbaugh and Bill Carson were tied for second with par 36's on the first nine, the former clinching third money with a 38 coming back while Carson was a shot higher. Danny Burton and Frank Cunningham's 37's were the second lowest on the B course.

Houghton and Cox split first and second prize money of $80, and Diffenbaugh received $20. The pros and Tommy Doerer made up the prize money.

Indian Spring.

The Giants defeated the Midgets for the fourth consecutive year at Indian Spring, but only after the most hectic battle of the series between the club heavyweights and lightweights.

The Midgets, the members weighing 150 pounds or less, were ahead by two points when the last foursome, of little known ability, approached the eighteenth green. But the big fellows, J. F. Feeney and F. H. Kramer, won all three points over L. G. Watzman and Phil Berman to make the final score read 24½ to 23½, Giants.

The feature match found the young team of Jack Rolinson and Buddy Sharkey upsetting Roger Peacock and Bobby Brownell, 3 points to 0, with Sharkey shooting an individual 69 and Robinson aiding on several holes, including the eighteenth where the back nine was decided.

Dick Kreuzberg and Don Dudley won 2½ points from Jock Olmsted and Arthur Urban, while the Giants duo of Dick Melvin and Jerry Hart, won 2½ from Leroy Sosscer and Lou Harrison in another top match. The Giants took eight out of a possible nine points in the three foursomes among the lower handicapped players.

CAPITAL

Roy K. Aten and Andy Miller won the Barry Pate Cup, symbolic of the two-man team championship at the Capital Club, by defeating C. Henry Cohen and James A. Hayes by a 2 and 1 margin in the yesterday's title match.

Cohen scored a one-over par 71, the best score of the round, his partner, Hayes, had an 84, Aten a 79 and Miller, a 100 shooter until Pro Tony Sylvester took him in hand several weeks ago, an 87. The winners benefited by seven handicap strokes.

Aten and Miller were two up and two to play, and the former clinched the match by placing his tee inches from the pin, for a conceded deuce. Miller and Cohen also deuced the hole. Aten, star of the underdog team, had three birdies in the round, including a pair of deuces, a feat matched by Cohen. The winners had a 76 best ball, minus seven handicap for a 69, while the losers scored a 70, even par.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Three teams tied with net 63s in the two-ball best-ball handicap at Congressoinal. Dr. R. A. Keilty and L. J. Bernard, R. J. Moore and F. E. Berquist and A. C. Paul and J. A. Zahn all split the top prizes.

BEAVER DAM.

John R. Miller's sub-par 34, two under regulation figures, won the qualifying medal in the miniature tournament at Beaver Dam. Three rounds of match play, including the finals, will conclude the event next week.

Other low scores included J. M. Palmer, 34; A. A. Hopick, 37; J. J. Morris, 38, and Edgar Johnson and Forrest Thomson, 39s.

KENWOOD.

Karl Corby, jr., scored a net 68 to set the pace for the first-round play in the Chamberlin Cup event at Kenwood. Corby had 75 with a 7 handicap.

W. O. Wooley was a stroke behind with 82-13—69, while F. McCrary, 86-16—70, and A. C. Doyle, 90-20—70, remained within two shots of the lead. The tourney will be concluded this week.

WASHINGTON.

R. E. Negle, C. E. Davis and A. P. Hester advanced to the semi-final round of the Horton Cup event, for 12 to 17 handicap players, at Washington. The fourth match will be completed this week.

R. L. Negle won on the nineteenth hole over C. W. Simonson, after playing the soggy outgoing nine in 36. Davis defeated A. H. Wilson in another 19-hole battle, while Hester won on the sixteenth hole by a 3-and-2 margin over D. E. Lee.

Shehan Is Victor In Sailing Race At Gibson Island

Baltimore, July 24 (AP).—W. Mason Shehan, jr., of Easton, won the J. Rulon Miller, sr., Trophy series for star class yachts today for the fifth time in the history of the sailing event sponsored by the Gibson Island yacht squadron.

Sailing his trim Little Flapper, young Shehan finished a poor fifth in today's race over the 9-mile triangular course off Gibson Island, but he amassed 59 points in the three-race series to outstrip all other skippers.

Trailing Shehan by 3 points in the series was W. Payne Thomas' Barracuda. Next in order were M. Grosvenor's Escape, 53 points; Hammond Gibson's Vesper, 47 points, and Fletcher Hanks' Duchess, 42 points.

Hanks sailed Duchess to victory in today's race, covering the course in 3.50:08 to beat out Grayling, sailed by Marjorie Hughson, of Gibson Island.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Starring in the opening game of yesterday's double-header, George Case stepped out in front of Buddy Lewis to take the lead in the Man of the Month contest. Points on the basis of yesterday's play were distributed among the Nats thusly:

To Dutch Leonard, five points, because in scoring a seven-hit victory in the second game he pitched shut-out ball in the last eight innings.

To Case, four points, because in the first game he made two of the Nats' eight hits, and drove in the first of their two runs.

To Al Simmons, three points, because he made three hits in the second game and contributed three sensational catches in leftfield, and because he delivered as a pinch-hitter in the first game.

To Taft Wright, two points, because he attempted to set the stage for a tying rally with a two-bagger in the eighth inning of the first game.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he collected two hits in the first game.

To Sammy West, two points, because his lone hit, in the second inning of the second game occurred with the bases full and put the Nats in a 2-to-1 lead.

To Jimmy DeShong, one point, because he held the Browns to two runs in six innings of relief pitching in the opener.

To Zeke Bonura, one point, because he made two hits in the second game, including a long fly ball that fell for a double and drove in three runs.

New Relay Champs Crowned

Another World Record Is Set By Katherine Rawls Thompson

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 24.—Katherine Rawls Thompson, of Florida, swam to a brilliant record-topping victory in the 880-yard free-style event today as the National A. A. U. outdoor aquatic meet for women came to a close.

The tiny Miami Beach Swimming Club star, cheered by an overflow crowd of 2,000 in the Biltmore Coral Casino, was clocked in 11 minutes, 33.2 seconds, bettering the time of 11 minutes, 34.4 seconds Lenore Knight Wingard set in New York in the summer of 1935.

The victory was the fourth successful defense of titles Katherine won in the National Outdoor a year ago, and matched the spectacular mile swim won here two days ago in world record claiming time.

Thirteen-year-old Mary Ryan, of Louisville, Ky., set the early pace in the race, but Mrs. Thompson pulled into a lead at the half-way point and was 30 yards in front at the finish. Ann Hardin, also of Louisville, won third place in a close battle with Nancy Merki, of Portland, Oreg., who was fourth.

The Los Angeles A. C. No. 1 team captured the 300-meter medley relay, defeating by two lengths the defending champion trio of the Women's Swimming Association of New York.

The time was 4 minutes 7.8 seconds.

The final lap was a close duel between Virginia Hopkins and Elizabeth Ryan, of the New York team, who lost her 100-meter free-style crown to the Los Angeles girl two days ago. Virginia was given a short lead going into the last lap and forged further to the front in the last 50 meters.

Ruth Jump, Los Angeles A. C., retained the national platform diving championship, scoring 93.8 points. Pressing clase behind was Marjorie Gestring, Los Angeles' national 3-meter springboard champion, with 91.92 points

Four Corners' Nine Wins.

The Four Corners baseball team nosed out the Southern Maryland Democrats, 4-3, yesterday in a well-played tilt on the latter's diamond. Morrell, Hurling and Donnelly starred for the winners at bat, but the outstanding feature of the tussle was a triple play executed by the victors.

Heintz Wins Cruiser Race

Good Sailing Features Shady Side Events

Good sailing featured Sunday's races off Shady Side as a 6-mile-per-hour breeze made skippers in the cruiser, 20-foot, albatross and comet class "pull" for every length made, with head work paying off at a high rate of exchange.

The cruisers sailed a windward-leeward 4-mile course, but it was not necessary to do much tacking. Other classes sailed a 2.7-mile triangular course. In contrast to lowering skies at Solomons Island, the West River racers had fair weather.

Heintz, in his cruiser Kippewa, won handily in 58 minutes 10 seconds with Gregory's Venture placing second, taking 1 hour and 15 minutes on the 4-mile run.

In the 20-foot open class, Harding's Ranger placed first, to again take the point lead in this division. Wing, skippered by Smith, placed second and Owings' Vanity third.

There were four entries in the 20-foot restricted class, and Bush in Cricket 2, who lost a mast last week, scored in 59 minutes and 30 seconds. Edrington in Lady Avon came in a minute later for second.

The albatrosses, as usual, staged a nip-and-tuck affair, with A. Hartge's Hawk nosing out Wells' Cardinal by two seconds. Wells led to the last buoy but lost out on his reach going home. Nine albatrosses started and all finished.

In the comet division, Verner Smythe again demonstrated his ability by sneaking home first in 1 hour 1 minute and 15 seconds. Second place went to Malcome Lamborne's Freya, sailed by Dankers with Mac doing remote control telepathy from Solomons Island.

Hide the Kiddies, Duseks Are Coming

Two more Duseks yesterday were signed up by Promoter Joe Turner for supporting bouts on the wrestling show featuring Cliff Olson, the Minnesota Swede, and Ernie Dusek Thursday night at Turner's Arena.

Emil's opponent will be Ed Meske.

Both will be 30-minute brawls.

Pace-Setting Pirates Win Pair, 5-4, 4-2

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 24.—The Pittsburgh Pirates strengthened their grip on first place in the National League today with a double-barrelled triumph over the Boston Bees, 5 to 4, in the first game which went 15 innings and 4 to 2 in the nightcap, abbreviated to six by Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew law.

The bees took a running start in the opener when Tony Cuccinello homered with one on in the first and nibbled at the offerings of Bob Klinger for two more runs before he was removed with none out in the fifth. Then Jim Tobin climbed the mound and gave only five hits in 11 scoreless innings which followed.

In the meantime the Pirates teed off on Bob Fette in the fifth for three runs and tied the score in the ninth. Finally in the fifteenth Gus Suh and John Rizzo doubled in succession to win. It was Tobin's eighth victory against four defeats.

Amateur honors went to Wilford Wehrle, of Racine, Wis., with a neat 214 total. Defending Champion Gene Sarazen, who drew a large portion of the gallery of 6,000 persons, finished with 219, along with Horton Smith, of Chicago, and Webb Gilbert, of Topeka, Kans.

The tournament originally was scheduled for 72 holes but a storm forced cancellation of Friday's program.

Muzzey Wins At Solomons

Total of 600 Points Tops Boat Racers.

By the Associated Press.

Solomons, Md., July 24.—Amassing a total of 600 points, Frank Muzzey, jr., towheaded sportsman from Philadelphia, took top scoring honors at the Solomon's Island Yacht Club's second annual regatta today, putting his speedboat Nittany Lyon second across the finish line first in four heats in two races.

Muzzey won both heats of the Class E event, and both heats in the race for Class K runabouts and under.

With lowering clouds giving away to sunshine in midafternoon, the regatta's second day show drew a crowd of several thousand persons who lined the shore and speedway in flag-bedecked cruisers. One of those standing by near the Coast Guard cutter Calypso was Gov. Harry W. Nice's yacht.

Also distracting the crowd's attention from the speedsters was a water spout, which appeared to be over the bay near Point No Point 5 or 6 miles away. It occurred about 3 p. m., and was visible for five minutes.

W. Earle Orem's new cigar-shaped Seager from Cambridge, Md., and Tom Glennon's Wild Goose of West Chester, Pa., provided today's racing thrill.

Off to a hair-raising start in which he slid with inches to spare between the Wild Goose and Washington sportsman Jack Hyde's Spectre, Orem's Seagar took the first heat in the race for boats with 225 cubin inch displacement.

But it was a squared-off start in the second heat and Wild Goose, riding thec hoppy, windswept course like its wings-flapping namesake, took the second heart with yards to spare. Seagar won the event however, on elapsed time.

CLASS E (first heat, 5 miles)—Winner, Frank Muzzey, jr (Nittany Lyon), Philadelphia; second, Arnold Lusby (Boba Gigi), Prince Frederick, Md.; third, Anne Wallen (Gidget), Solomons, Md. Time, 8:36.4. Speed, 34.867 m. p. h.

135 AND 91 CUBIC INCH HYDROPLANE (first heat, 5 miles)—Winner, Emery Fuller (Miss Pudd), Washington; second, Gardner Orem (Wooden Horse), driven by Jess Snyder (Washington). No third. Time, 8:54.4. Speed 33.682 m. p. h.

Steel Output, 36%, Equals Best of Year

But Buying Is Developing Les Rapidly Than Production.

Cleveland, July 24.—Tangible evidence of recovery in steel buying is appearing, but at a less rapid pace than is indicated by the improvement in sentiment and in raw steel production, according to the magazine Steel.

The industry has high hopes that the recent spurt in activity will be furthered during the balance of the year, although subsequent betterment in operation undoubtedly will be unable to match that of the past two weeks, when ingot output was stepped up 50 per cent.

Production rose an additional 4 points last week to 36 per cent, equal to the rate reached in the first week of April, highest this year. Since the July 4 holiday the rate has advanced 12 points.

Diversified Orders.

Encouraging to producers is the diversification of recent orders. A sprinkling of purchases by automobile accounts for final runs on 1938 models, however, has moderated for the time being as the period for the changeover to 1939 editions is being entered. Little support to steel buying will be provided by motor interests until this work is completed.

Reflecting automotive plant shutdowns, assemblies last week totaled 32,070 units, a decline of nearly 10,000 from the week before. General Motors curtailed from 17,900 units to 13,415; Ford was steady at 12,500; Chrysler reduced from 6,190 units to 2,750, while all others cut from 5,420 to 3,405.

Production of material for the building of 5,550 freight cars for the Southern Railway has been an important factor in boosting steelmaking at Chicago and Birmingham. Chicago operations gained 1.5 points to 34 per cent last week, while the Southern district was 8 points higher at 50 per cent. Gains predominated changes elsewhere, with Pittsburgh up 2 points to 27 per cent; Wheeling up 6 points to 51 per cent, Youngstown up 5 points to 35, eastern Pennsylvania up 0.5 to 28, New England up 5 to 40, and Cincinnati up 12 to 50 per cent. Production was unchanged at four centers—Buffalo at 35, Cleveland at 26, Detroit at 29 and St. Louis at 18.

Better Business Due From Now Until New Year, Babson Says

But Unemployment and Short-Sighted Labor Tactics, He Declares, Are Still Unfavorable Factors.

By Roger W. Babson.

Gloucester, Mass, July 24.—I expect to see better business each month from now until the New Year. A real upturn is in the cards. But looking further ahead, I am not so optimtstic. Our unemployment problem is not being solved. There is no hope of ending joblessness until labor and the Administration change their attitude. Current union tactics are short-sighted. Labor is slashing its own throat. Employers, sick of fighting with unions, are now bending their energies to the development of labor-saving machinery.

I especially hope that the current upswing in business will not give radical labor leaders further encouragement. The Babsonchart for July is registering the first monthly gain in business activity since last August. The chart shows that business has come up from 28 per cent to 25 per cent below normal. This advance is not big—but the trend is in the right direction. In fact, a sharp jump in business this fall is inevitable. This upswing will not be due to pump-priming. To this fall's business, Federal spending will be only what a dessert is to a man who has already had a square meal. Irrespective of pump-priming, a natural rally from the year-old recession was bound to come.

A Labor Recession.

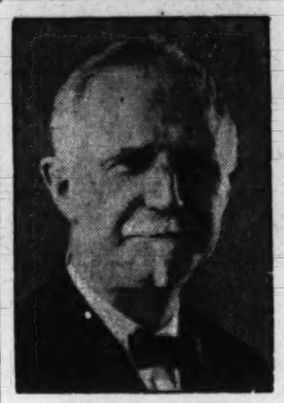
There were many outstanding contributing causes to the recession. Forced stock selling was a major item. But the decline was really started by labor troubles. Everyone — manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer, consumer—was scared that higher wages would force prices into the stratosphere. There was a stampede of forward buying. Goods were over-produced. Inventories all down the line were overstocked. The buying started to drop because of the mark-up in prices which the higher wages forced. The drop in demand, together with the huge supply of goods on hand, put business into the sharpest tailspin in history.

Now it looks as though the losses of the past year will be wiped out by a sharp upturn. Several millions should go back to work between now and Christmas. Looking ahead into the longer-term future, however, I see little prospect of eliminating unemployment until there is a real change in the attitude of labor and in the attitude of the Administration concerning labor. Any gains in jobs due to increased demand for goods will be offset by more technological unemployment due to radical labor demands. (By technological unemployment I mean workers being put out of jobs by labor-saving machinery.)

Two Do the Work of Three.

The possibilities of labor-saving machinery are almost limitless. They stagger the imagination. Two workers today are doing what three did ten years ago. This means that our standard of living is rising, and that the two men have more leisure. But to the third man, who is thrown out of work, it seems just the opposite! Eventually, this jobless third man may be absorbed into some other business. Perhaps he will go into the industry which makes the labor-saving machine that took his job. Maybe he will go back to his old industry where sales are booming due to lower prices for the machine-made product which he formerly made by hand. Eventually, he will find a new job; but, in the interim, he creates a real problem.

Labor-saving machinery has given us our wonderful standard of living. To continue to produce goods by hand when they can be made by machine is retarding progress. But the sensible policy is to bring about technological progress slowly. Any program which artificially stimulates the use of labor-saving devices aggravates the whole problem. Yet, labor leaders are doing just that. Their radical demands and violent actions are forcing employers to devote their efforts to the development of new lavor-saving processes. Labor leaders are sabotaging their followers; while the Administration, in fomenting labor troubles, is misleading workers.



ROGER W. BABSON.

The Employer's Dilemma.

The employer is sick and tired of this constant bickering and fighting. Hemmed in by "stewards" (the factory's union representative), manacled by threats of the Wagner labor act, and worried by high demands, he has had enough. Yet he really does not want to buy machinery now. He feels that he does not have the proper reserves. Moreover, he hates to see his men thrown out of work. In many a factory the "boss" knows most of his workers and their families personally. It hurts him to fire them. But what can he do?

If he marks up the price of his goods, he loses orders and has to lay off workers. That is what happened in 1937. There is no use in going through that again. If he absorbs the higher wage costs and keeps his goods at the same price, he loses money. Running a business at a loss does not help anyone. Hence, the employer's only alternative is to cut costs by installing more labor-saving machinery and discharging more workers. Millions of dollars' worth of such machinery has already been installed. The surface, however, has scarcely been scratched. Huge possibilities lie ahead.

Killing the Goose.

For instance, the textile people are watching the new cellophane materials now being used for raincoats. These coats are simply pressed and stamped out, rather than spun and loomed. I am told that this cellophane material—improved, colored, and made opaque—will be substituted for cheap rayon and cotton dresses. There are literally hundreds of new, practically laborless, plastic products. They take the place of metal and wood products made by laborious methods. They save untold sums in overhead and labor costs.

By now pushing for more supposed advantages, workers are only forcing employers to install more of these labor-saving machines and processes. I do not blame workers for wanting more money. That is only human. Furthermore, I believe in collective bargaining. But labor is foolish to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. As I warned workers in March, 1937, "higher wages are not all they are cracked up to be!" I repeat that warning today."

N. Y. Bank Stocks Continue Gains

New York, July 24.—Further gains were recorded by the New York City bank stock market, during the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on July 22 was $1,391,615,000 compared with $1,372,833,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $18,783,000 or 1.37 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market during the past week also showed continuing gains to register a new 1938 high at the close. The aggregate value at the close on July 22 totaled $587,975,000 to compare with $578,662,000 at the close of the previous week, a net increase of $9,313,000 or 1.61 per cent.

Nickel Plate Asks Extension of Notes

Cleveland, July 24 (AP). — The Nickel Plate Railroad today asked holders of $15,000,000 in three-year, 6 per cent notes to extend them for another three years beyond October 1, when the principal is due.

"Unless this proposal is accepted by the holders of substantially all of the notes, a reorganization of your company under the provisions of section 77 of the bankruptcy act is inevitable," President George D. Brooke advised the holders.

The Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Potomac Insurance Company of the District of Columbia, for the election of directors, will be held in the office of the company, 900-906 F Street N. W., Washington, D. C., Monday, August 1, 1938, at 11 a. m. The books for the transfer of stock will be closed from July 25th to August 1st, inclusive, 1938. Alexander K. Phillips, Sec'y.

Business Probe A Broad Study, Not an Attack

O'Mahoney Committee Will Try to Locate Sore Spots in Nation's Economy.

By Edward H. Collins,
A Special Correspondent.

New York, July 24.—Despite its popular designation as the "anti-monopoly" committee there seems to be little basis for the belief that the newly appointed national economic committee, which will get down to serious work next month, has the slightest intention of trying to "make little ones" out of America's large industrial units.

Joseph C. O'Mahoney, chairman of this group of "trouble-shooters," has indicated a number of the sore spots in the American business economy that he hopes something can be done about, and the diversity of these items indicates a very wide scope for the inquiry. It quite justifies the observation of the United States News that "what is now under way is a study of the country's whole economic system," and that "the object is to find out what makes that system tick and what makes it stop ticking—to discover who controls the system, and how the controls are exercised."

All this being so, however, it would be a mistake to think of the coming inquiry as simply a sortie in the dark. It may be likened rather to a surgeon's exploratory operation. Such operations are rarely undertaken in the absence of at least one diagnosis, however according to the best information shadowy that may be. And this, and belief, is the case with the proposed "operation" of the national economic committee. Wherever it may ultimately lead.

A Definite Philosophy.

It appears to stem in the first instance from a very definite philosophy as to "what is wrong with the American economy." That is the philosophy to which WPA Economist Leon Henderson gives expression from time to time in his outbursts against "monopoly prices," and whose high priest is Gardiner C. Means, co-author with A. A. Berle, jr., of "The Modern Corporation and Private Property."

Mr. Means' thesis was set forth originally in a memorandum which the author, as economic adviser to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, prepared for the latter more than four years ago. It dealt (1) with the behavior of prices during depression, and (2) as its author phrased it, with "the meaning of the price inflexibilities which were disclosed." The title of the study is "Industrial Prices and Their Relative Inflexibility."

The basic cause of the "breakdown of a laissez faire policy" in this country, according to Mr. Means, is to be found in the same forces which have made possible the present high standard of living, namely, the century-long shift "from market to administrative co-ordination of economic activity." This shift has brought "a new type of competition and inflexibly administered prices which disrupt the workings of the market."

Co-ordination.

"A century ago," observes the author of "Industrial Prices and Their Relative Inflexibility," the great bulk of economic activity in the United States was based on an atomistic basis by individuals or families—as is most of agriculture today—while the actions of the separate individuals were co-ordinated by the market . . ." He adds: "Gradually, more and more of economic co-ordination has been accomplished administratively. . . . This has made possible tremendous increases in the efficiency of industrial production within single enterprises. But the concentration of economic activity has, by its very nature, destroyed the free market and disrupted the operations of the law of supply and demand.

Means' Solution.

Mr. Means' solution for the problem which he thus envisions is neither Government ownership nor a return to "the good old days" through the breaking up of the large existing business units, thus restoring what he calls an "atomistic" economy. Without going into detail, it may be said briefly that his proposal is to set up "an institutional framework through which the key industrial decisions might be made which would insure the optimum use of our industrial resources."

At least two economists—Don D. Humphrey and Rufus S. Tucker—have seriously examined the Means thesis within recent months, and both have found it unconvincing. No single article of this length, obviously, can do even approximate justice to the arguments of Mr. Means, on one side of this extremely important controversy, and Mr. Humphrey and Mr. Tucker on the other. If the writer may be forgiven for borrowing a well-known advertising slogan, however, he would like to suggest most earnestly to members of the national economic committee and others who are vitally interested that they "look at all three before they decide."

Madrillon Has 'Jam Sessions' Once a Week

But They're Exclusively for Star Night Club Musicians.

Most exclusive and perhaps most amusing parties in town are those "jam sessions" held about once a week at Madrillon between the shining early hours of 2 and 5 in the morning. Star musicians from night spots and theaters all over town attend these wacky musicales. About a dozen of them get up on the bandstand, and after that it's every man for himself. The way the boys swing out and slap in the hot licks is something tremendous.

This boiling "jam" represents either the final key-up or the big let-down from an evening of playing dance music, depending on the way you look at it. The Madrillon "jam sessions" usually take place on Wednesday nights (more accurately Thursday mornings), but they're strictly for musicians—unless you can find some way to crash the gate.

CCC Boys Taught To Put Out Fires

Civilian Conservation Corps boys in all camps in or near timbered areas in the country have been taught proper forest-fire fighting methods this year, Director Robert Fechner announced yesterday.

Decision to require fire-fighting training was prompted by past experience which shows that each year CCC enrollees spend approximately 1,000,000 man-days fighting fires that develop in national, State and private forests in national and State parks.

National Guard To Resume War At Front Royal

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., July 24.—The camp of the Twenty-ninth Division Headquarters played host today to approximately 250 friends of the National Guardsmen stationed here, on the first dry day of the encampment which began July 16.

Most of the visitors were from Washington, from where the bulk of the troops have come, but visitors also came from Virginia and Maryland cities, to visit the other troops from these States.

The staff officers and the men of the Headquarters Co., Twenty-ninth Division and the Headquarters Detachment, Twenty-ninth Division, rested today preparatory to resuming the war games tomorrow morning at dawn.

Reviews Past Events.

Breakfast will be served at 5 a. m. Col. S. L. Pike, Army Instructor, attached to the division, will muster the officers and men at 5:30 a. m., after which "hostilities" will again commence. Col. Pike and Maj. Sidney Morgan, umpires, spent most of today reviewing the events of the past two days of maneuvering. The 121st Engineers Band, under Warrant Officer Meyer Goldman, left camp today for Washington, after playing at church services and at a concert this afternoon.

The wives of Capts. Robert M. Bolton, Hugh Everett, jr., and Louis Gosorn and Lieuts. Malcoln T. Powell, Charles Rust and James B. Bradley, all of Washington, were in camp. Gen. Beverly Brown was at camp. Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division, was the guest of Brig. Gen. Gardner Waller, at the latter's nearby home.

Coincidence Revealed.

A remarkable coincidence came to light here. Before the World War, Col. John W. Oehmann, now in command of the 121st Engineers, District of Columbia National Guard, was captain of Company C of the Third District of Columbia Infantry, and was stationed at the Mexican border for service during the trouble there.

His tent was at that time pitched adjacent to that of the captain of Company D. Then the troops were sent to France. These particular tents have since been assigned for use by the Virginia National Guard. Today at the camp Col. Oehlmann finds adjacent to his own the same tent, the original markings there to prove it.

Mrs. Taliaferro, Active Charity Worker, Dies

Former Commissioner's Wife Was Trustee of Community Chest.

Mrs. Elizabeth Fulton Taliaferro, Washington philanthropist and wife of former Commissioner Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president of the Riggs National Bank, died yesterday at her home, 3102 P street northwest, after a long illness.

Gas Station Loses $50 To 'Family' of Three

After Weston put 10 gallons of gas in a car driven by "a pretty woman," a man alighted, drew a gun, and took the money while a 13-year-old boy yanked the telephone from the wall.

Bob Burns Says—

There's a lot'a difference between a hobo, a tramp and a bum. I have to explain the difference in the picture I'm makin' now and that's the reason I've been tryin' to get ahold of Jeff Davis, the king of hoboes, to straighten me out. I certainly wouldn't want to offend anybody.

Three years ago, when I signed a moving picture contract, I got a telegram from one of my uncles that said "congratulations on your rapid rise—your success should be an inspiration to every bum in the country."

Cardenas Calls Parley on U. S. Land Protest

Studies Hull Arbitration Proposal on Seized Farm Properties.

Mexico City, July 24, (AP).—President Lazardo Cardenas sacrificed his usual week-end vacation for conferences in Mexico City, believed to center on the United States proposal for arbitration of the issue of Mexico's seizure, without compensation, of American-owned farm properties.

The President called off a trip today to Finca Palmira, his unpretentious hill-top cottage at nearby Cuernavaca, to confer with the secretaries of foreign relations, treasury and national economics.

The subject of the discussions was not announced but it was assumed that last Thursday's note from Secretary of State Cordell Hull on the seizure of American-owned lands in Mexico came in for a major share of attention.

"The majesty of the law," it added, "permits strong nations or weak to assert themselves with force of reason and of justice over any other force.

"Therefore, it would be a formidable stroke if President Cardenas should put the issue under guardianship of international justice, making it not only possible but obligatory for the United States to continue assisting us, and facilitating the program of social and economic improvement of President Cardenas."

The Communist Party said Hull's note "constitutes pressure against Mexico inspired by the petroleum companies. The policy of the good neighbor ought to be consistent and not subject to pressure of interests which many times opposed our people and those of the United States."

The United States note did not mention Mexico's expropriation last March of oil lands owned by British and United States companies, but was confined to agrarian properties expropriated since August 30, 1927, valued in excess of $10,000,000.

U. S. Mining Man Disappears From Hotel in Hongkong

Mrs. Sage, who remained here, said she received a cablegram from her husband saying he would return July 16. When he failed to appear she appealed to Hongkong police. Police reported Sage walked from his Hongkong hotel July 18, without his hat, luggage or passport, and has not been seen since.

Sage, a native of Rochester, Ill., and a graduate of Beloit College and the Colorado School of Mines, had lived in Manila about four years.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Crippy Is Heard From.

Suffering will never pass.
—Old Mother Nature.

Aunt Sally, hostess of the Woodhouse Night Club, was definitely worried. For over two years one of the most constant visitors to the woodhouse had been Crippy, a hand some Coon who at some time previous to her acquaintance with Aunt Sally had lost her left front leg in a trap. Through sheer courage she had overcome the terrible handicap of her crippled condition and had held her own in the struggle to live, which is the lot of all the people of the Green Meadow and the Green Forest. Not only had she successfully obtained a living for herself, but to Aunt Sally's certain knowledge she had successfully raised two families, for during the first summer of their acquaintance Crippy had brought to the night club four children, and during the second summer she had brought five. How many children she might have raised before Aunt Sally knew her, there was no way of knowing.

Not only was Crippy stout of heart but she was possessed of understanding and sound sense. She knew Aunt Sally was to be trusted, and when she visited the woodhouse there was no foolish timidity. She climbed into the hospitable lap of her hostess with perfect confidence, and there ate her fill from the pan of food that never failed her, Aunt Sally talking to her and stroking her all the while. There was a strong bond of affection between them.

This year she had appeared early after the long winter sleep, and had been visiting the woodhouse regularly. Now for a week she had not appeared and Aunt Sally worried. She feared that something had happened to Crippy.

"She'll come back," declared Farmer Brown's boy confidently. "You know last fall she was gone for two or three weeks, but she came back."

"I know," agreed Aunt Sally, "but it was a very different matter then. I was worried then lest she be trapped or shot, but not worried as I am now. You see I know why she went then. Wild grapes were ripe, and there were other fruits and things a Coon likes. The children had to be shown those things and how to find them. You know she took the children with her. But now it is different, very different. Those children are fully grown, able to look out for themselves. But I fear that there are other children now and if so they are babies and helpless. Their mother wouldn't leave them for a longer time than necessary to get food, and you know that wouldn't be long for there is always food here for her."

Tommy had to admit the truth of this, but he stoutly held his ground. "Just the same, Aunt Sally, I don't believe anything has happened to her. What could? There are no hunters or trappers looking for Coons at this time of year. She is too big to fear other enemies."

"She may have been caught and killed or terribly hurt by a Dog, or perhaps more than one Dog," said Aunt Sally.

This was true. "I hadn't thought of that," said Tommy. "Just the same I don't believe anything of the kind has happened. I am sure we would know it if there had. You know Sue and Sammy and I have looked everywhere for some distance around here and we haven't found a sign of her. She wouldn't go far away, and if there had been a fight I am sure we would have found signs of it."

Just then the telephone rang. It was a long distance call. There was a look of mingled amazement and distress on Aunt Sally's face as she hung up. "That," said she, "was a friend of mine who lives 30 miles from here. She knows about my Night Club and she asked if Crippy is missing. When I said 'yes' she told me that Crippy is in an animal hospital in Wellset. You know there is one there, Tommy."

Turtle, Bearing Name Carved 43 Years Ago, Found

Williamsport, July 24.—Forty-three-years ago yesterday C. T. Strouse of this town picked up a turtle at North Mountain, W. Va., and carved his name and the date, July 23, 1895, on the shell.

Last week Strouse was notified that Frank Olinger, North Mountain, had come across the turtle in his backyard and that the name and date still were as legible as the day they were carved.
